Little Highbrow Birds. You Can't Hurry Eggs. Why Newspapers Die. Money Is Frozen Power.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

RAY LONG, who edits magazines, gave a dinner party on Thursday for Boris Pilniak, young Russian of great talent. Pilniak made what sounded like a fine speech in Russian.

Those that applauded violently included 20 of the highest browed intellectuals, including Rupert Hughes, Irvin Cobb, Sinclair Lewis, Nobel prize winner, Theodore Dreiser, who writes what he thinks plainly, Montague Glass, who, to his eternal glory, invented Potash and Perlmutter, and an admiring chorus of correspondents, editors and assorted columnists, including Heywood Broun.

THERE WAS interesting and childish discussion of the merits of Capitalism, Socialism, Communism, and the possibility of convincing human beings that they really don't want to own property, in spite of the fact that they have been murdering each other to get it for more than a million years.

ONE YOUNG enthusiast said:

"The youth of Russia will grow up not knowing anything about money, not interested in it."

That sounds nice. But 15 years ago Prohibitionists were telling you:

"Our young people will grow up knowing nothing about whisky, not interested in it."

Look at them now, each with a whisky bottle hidden away in his or her clothing.

YOUNG HIGHBROWS discussing Socialism, Communism and aboliton of property, are like 3-year-old children, discussing ways and means of making their 6-weeks-old brother walk right away.

He will walk when he is ready to walk. Forcing will only make him bandy-legged. Human beings will abandon grasping selfishness in due time. You cannot hurry them in their progress. You can't hatch a hen's egg in 10 days. But the egg does hatch.

WHEN THE party died away, according to morning newspapers, between those that stayed late there was discord, two highbrows forgetting Watts' beautiful lines:

"Birds in their little nests agree,
And 'tis a shameful sight
When children of one family
Fall out, and chide, and fight."

However, it didn't last long, nobody was hurt, the air was cleared.

The talented Pilniak and Russian friends from the Amtorg had gone home and will not be able to tell Stalin, "We saw capitalistic American highbrows fighting."

THE NEW YORK World is "dead as a mutton," its former employes have received the last pay they will get. And soon a book will appear, "The End of the World," purporting to tell all about it.

There is nothing mysterious in that death. It was as natural as that a watch should stop when its mainspring is taken out.

The late Joseph Pulitzer said a great deal when he told his chief associate, S. S. Carvalho, long ago:

"Carvalho, a newspaper is made by the heart of its owner."

THE IRVING Trust Company, one of the greatest banks of America, yesterday dedicated its skyscraper, 50 stories high, at the corner of Wall street and Broadway. Among the decorations is a great painting showing the "power of wealth to create beauty."

Wealth can create anything, for it is frozen labor and frozen intelligence, waiting to be released.

ALSO YESTERDAY the Stock Exchange announced plans for a $10,000,000 addition to its already gigantic building. That intelligent institution knows that business will come back stronger than ever.

And little lambs now growing another crop of wool may recognize some of the last crop in the new stone and marble.

COMMENT RECENTLY published in this column was intended to arouse interest in Mexico, the wonderful land and people south of us.

The next paragraph really will arouse interest.

"Northeast of Mazatlan, in the Mexican state of Sinaloa, 'gold has been discovered in abnormal quantities."

Two men have brought out 1200 pounds of gold. Some prospectors have collected as much as five pounds of gold in a day, worth close to $2,000! And veins are said to be so rich in some places that "the precious metal is cut off in hunks with a hunting knife."

Exaggeration always comes with a gold rush. But hundreds have started on this rush; 1,600 claims have been filed. Nothing attracts like gold.

THE STOCK Exchange does not seem to know quite what it wants to do. Brokers' loans are increasing a little, but, in spite of that, call money on the Stock Exchange yesterday dropped to 1 per cent, lowest since June, 1915.

You can sympathize with long rows of great banks, their vaults full of money, the Federal Reserve ready to lend them any amount more, and nobody to borrow it, that is, nobody with collateral.

RAISE DOUBT ON SUPPLY DELIVERY

Auditors Attempt to Verify If Reported Purchases Actually Went to Home

Records of the City Home at Mayview have been checked by the auditors of the Citizens' Committee to determine if supplies reported as purchased by the City Department of Supplies were really delivered to the institution.

This was revealed today as the mission of M. C. Conick, directing the Main & Co. audit for the Citizens Committee, who, with three assistants, went to Mayview yesterday.

IRREGULARITIES

A report of what the citizens audit has revealed was made yesterday to the executive committee of the Citizens Committee. Reports of startling irregularities in more than one city department were made to them, it was learned.

The records now being scanned by Main & Co. and by Price, Waterhouse & Co. for Controller James P. Kerr, include orders from almost every department and bureau in the city for 1930.

The two groups of auditors are working together in Courtroom No. 8 in the City-County Building. While the two forces co-operate, it is understood that their methods are different.

The objective of Main & Co. seems to include the gathering of clues or any information which may throw light on the city's purchasing methods. The auditors for the controller are reported making a complete survey of the records, but not to be seeking outside the books for their knowledge.

DENIES STARTLING RESULTS

Price, Waterhouse & Co. have not yet reported to Dr. Kerr any irregularities of a startling nature, he declared, after a conference with them late yesterday. Dr. Kerr said:

"Price, Waterhouse & Co. are making a most comprehensive audit of the 1929 and 1930 department records. These papers are in process of being examined. If any discrepancies are discovered, they will be embodied in a report to me direct."

Records of the Department of Public Works are among those being examined by the auditors.

Henry Oliver Evans, former controller, who has been granted a hearing next Wednesday by City Council, has declared he will make no effort to show fraud by anyone. He declared he would seek only to demonstrate poor business methods in the letting of paving and sewer contracts. He said:

"The possible losses to the city in the Department of Public Works with the immense quantities of materials involved make anything in the Department of Supplies look trivial."

Banker's Wife Wins Gambling Loss Suit

TOLEDO, March 21.—(AP.)—Benjamin Aronoff will have to pay Mrs. Lucy Hack, of Milan, Mich., $1,000 for the gambling losses which she said her husband, a former Milan banker, suffered in betting on horse races and other events at Aronoff's establishment. A jury awarded her that much yesterday after the statute of limitations had cut her $150,000 suit down to $3 100. Her husband testified he had bet on horse races at Aronoff's place.

Dancer's Escort Held Over Brawl at Party

PATRICIA A. DUNN, 21 . . . "HELP, POLICE," OPERATOR HEARD

Miss Dunn, whose charge of assault and battery was aired before a justice of the peace with the result that Andrew Sumner Braznell II, 21, 423 South Braddock avenue, was held for court to answer for beating her, tearing her clothes in her birthday party.

Girl Says He Beat Her During Struggle in East End Apartment

The twenty-first birthday party of comely Patricia A. Dunn, blonde East Liberty dancing teacher, has found its way into Justice of the Peace Ira H. Edmundson's court after a party which began in a fashionable South Braddock avenue apartment and wound up in a police patrol ride to Squirrel Hill Police Station.

Miss Dunn's companion of a week ago, according to testimony at the hearing before Justice Edmundson last night, was Andrew Sumner Braznell II, 21, of 423 South Braddock avenue, who was held for court on charges of assault and battery under $2,000 bonds.

"BEATEN BY FRIEND"

Miss Dunn testified to having been beaten and knocked down several times by Braznell, a friend of three and a half years' acquaintance, according to the pretty blonde. Her clothes were torn, she said, and finally after a struggle she reached the telephone. The instrument was knocked from her hand, she declared, as she screamed:

"Help! Police!"

The operator, hearing the cry, called Squirrel Hill police, and Lieut. W. J. Lavery responded with a motorcycle patrolman. Lavery took the couple to the po-

HIT-RUN DRIVER KILLS MAN

Police today held one automobile driver in connection with a crash while county detectives searched for the hit-run driver who killed a man in Elizabeth last night.

The dead man was Crawford Painter, 55, of Elizabeth. He was run down in the Bunola road, near his home. A passing motorist found his body and took it to an Elizabeth undertaking establishment.

Wallace B. Maxwell, 37, of Allison Park, was held on a reckless driving charge at Central Police Station as a result of a crash at Seventh avenue and Bigelow boulevard last night. Police said he ran through a yellow light and collided with a machine ridden by Lieut. Edward Goodman. Patrolman Arthur Baker, who was following, ran into the lieutenant, and Patrolman Thomas McGuire ran into Baker.

Oscar Johnson, 32, of Jenny Lind street, McKeesport, was in McKeesport Hospital today suffering a possible fractured skull, received, police say, when a motorcycle which he was driving collided with a truck at Jenny Lind and Willow street, late yesterday.

Hymie to Deny Woman's Alibi, Offers His Own

CLEVELAND, March 21.—(AP.)—"Pittsburgh Hymie" Martin will go on trial Monday for the murder of former Councilman William E. Potter, denying not only the alibi offered by two Pittsburgh men, but also the story of his sweetheart, Mrs. Mary Outland Woodfield, of Akron.

Martin will swear that he was in an Akron Hotel the night of February 3, when the former councilman was beaten and shot to death in an East Side apartment, it was revealed in a defense notice served on Prosecutor Ray T. Miller late yesterday by Martin's lawyers.

Martin's defense deserts the story of Lou Frischman, Pittsburgh haberdasher, and Bernard Schaecter, his clerk, who swore Martin was in their store the night of February 3.

The new alibi also contradicts the story of Mrs. Woodfield, better known as "Akron Mary," who has sworn she and Martin were in Dormont, Pittsburgh suburb, the night of the killing.

Pershing Again Foiled Foch

Renewed efforts on the part of the French to assume control of American forces were made by Marshal Foch at the instigation of Clemenceau, Gen. John J. Pershing reveals. Pershing again foiled the Allied commander's schemes. In today's installment of his memoirs, appearing daily and Sunday in the Sun-Telegraph, Gen. Pershing describes both French and British efforts to withhold from America full credit for its World War achievements.

LIFE SENTENCE FOR BATDORF IN SLAYING

Sisters Weep as Skidmore Gangster Hears Fate for Cripple's Holdup Murder

Eugene Batdorf, 20, of McKees Rocks, was sentenced today to serve a life sentence in Western Penitentiary for the slaying of "Chuck" Hamon, crippled Warrington avenue gasoline station attendant.

A jury returned a verdict of guilty this morning after deliberating more than 22 hours.

In imposing sentence, Visiting Judge Norman T. Boose, of Somerset County, said:

"You helped to destroy the life of one of God's creatures, and you must pay the penalty."

SISTERS WEEP

Batdorf showed no emotion when the verdict was returned.

His three sisters wept quietly in the rear of the courtroom.

His attorney, after conferring with relatives, said he would not ask for a new trial.

Batdorf and Henry White, alias Uccillino, were indicted together with George C. Skidmore, fugitive, who shot his way through a cordon of police when they cornered him in a mountain cabin near Bellefonte.

BLAMES SKIDMORE

It was charged that White and Batdorf aided Skidmore in killing Hamon in the gas station holdup.

From the witness stand Batdorf pleaded he did not fire the shot that killed Hamon and declared he did not actually participate in the robbery. He said Skidmore had used "psychology on me."

Batdorf declared Skidmore shot Hamon and carried off the cash register from the gasoline station.

OXFORD CREW BEATEN AGAIN

PUTNEY-ON-THAMES, Eng., March 21. — (INS.) — For the eighth year in succession the magnificent eight of Cambridge University admistered a stinging defeat to Oxford in the annual boat race here today, finishing two and one-half lenghts ahead of their traditional rivals in the eighty-third running of the event.

The victory dashed Oxford's hopes of tying the total score, for it gave Cambridge 42 victories to Oxford's 40.

A million spectators saw the race, lining the banks of the Thames, hanging over bridges, in special trains, punts and powerboats along the river's edge.

Cambridge shot into the lead at the getaway and never lost its advantage.

Cambridge's time for the grueling four-and-one-half-mile test of brain and brawn was 19 minutes and 26 seconds.

GERMAN POLICE BEAT SON OF EX-KAISER

Prince Wilhelm, Fascist Leader, Kicked, Mauled At Railways Station

International News Service.

KOENIGSBERG, Germany, March 21.—The charge that Prince August Wilhelm, fourth son of the former German Kaiser and a strong supporter of the German Fascist cause, was set upon by policemen and savagely manhandled was made by National Socialist (Fascist) spokesmen here today.

The attack, it was charged, occurred when the prince was about to board a train with Joseph Goebbels, Berlin lieutenant of Adolf Hitler, leader of the Fascist party.

The charges declared that the prince was beaten with nightsticks and sent on his way with lusty kicks.

The police version of the affair was that a crowd of 800 East Prussian Fascists gathered at the station to bid the prince and Goebbels farewell. The mob was unruly, the police declared, and resisted the attempts of officers to maintain order.

Further, the authorities declare that the crowd beat up three policemen who tried to interfere, forcing the officers to charge in with their truncheons.

Two of the Fascists were arrested.

National Socialists asserted that several hundred of them were giving August Wilhelm and Goebbels a peaceful ovation at the railway station from which they were about to entrain after the police had refused permission for a mass meeting at which they were billed to speak.

Police said, however, that the National Socialists rioted at the station and manhandled police who tried to preserve order. When the station police tried to clear the platform, the officers said, the National Socialists became threatening and the constables waded into the crowd with rubber clubs regardless of the presence of a Hohenzollern.

Civic Guard Leader Slain in Ireland

BELFAST, Northern Ireland, March 21.—(AP.)—John Curtin, superintendent of the Tipperary Civic Guards, was found outside his mother's residence last night shot through the arms, legs and near the heart by unidentified assassins. He died a few hours afterwards. Curtin recently had participated in a widespread roundup of suspects.

Hoover Now Rides Warship; Gave Up Yacht in Time

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

Mr. Hoover is enjoying his ocean itinerary on the Arizona, which vindicates his judgment.

He gave up the Mayflower before she sank.

The sinking of the Mayflower is now attributed to Bill Taft's famous marble bathtub, which weighed more than a small island.

Mr. Hoover can enjoy this trip. There is nothing unusual to worry about. There is a Treasury deficit of $700,000,000. But like Eve's first dress, we are doing the best we can with the material at hand.

There was a generous slump in income tax receipts. That's because Andy Mellon signs dol-

SERGT. JOHN E. FREY

HUNT IN POLICE KILLING WIDENS

ALBANY, N. Y., March 21.—(AP.)—Two youthful, heavily-armed fugitives, one sought as the slayer of a state trooper, apparently found an aperture in a cordon spread over several states and are eluding pursuit.

After 48 hours of duty without sleep, virtually all of the 600 New York State Troopers today were running down clues to the whereabouts of Stanley Chero, 20, and William Schemnitzer, 19, both of Broughton, Pa.

Chero is wanted for the fatal shooting of Sergt. John E. Frey, of Troy, Wednesday night, while Frey and Trooper Edward Updyke were taking him and Schemnitzer to the Rensselaer County Jail at Troy as suspects in a robbery. The officers were in separate cars, one a police machine. The other had been stolen in Pittsburgh.

Princes to Start Journey Home Today

BUENOS AIRES, March 21.—(AP.)—The Prince of Wales and Prince George, who came here a fortnight ago to open the British Trade Exposition, reached the end of their visit today.

Chicago Opera Star Honored by France

CHICAGO, March 21.—(AP.)—A cable from Paris yesterday reported that Lotte Lehmann, soprano of the Chicago Civic Opera, had been decorated with the cross of Knight of the Legion of Honor. She is one of the first Germans decorated by France since the World War, and one of few women so honored. The singer came to Chicago from the Vienna Opera last fall.

GOVERNOR'S PARLEY RAISES HOPES

Delegates to Conference Optimistic; McGovern Scores Pittsburgh Force

By ED PRENDERGAST
Staff Correspondent.

HARRISBURG, March 21.—The coal and iron police issue rested today while labor leaders and others interested in the abolition of the system discussed Gov. Pinchot's obviously sincere wish to aid in the solution.

Impressed by yesterday's conference with the Governor, the Pittsburgh and other delegations of industrial and labor representatives returned home, optimistic over prospects for a compromise, which may be reached next Friday at the Governor's second conference.

SIX TO ATTEND

Six men will attend, three for industry and three for labor, to settle on the provisions of the bill. Whether the Wilson bill, which is Pinchot's own, or the Musmanno bill is amended, or whatever substitute plan is evolved, it is believed an agreement is possible.

Until then, little action on the issue is expected. The Musmanno bill will be up for second reading in the House next week. The Wilson bill remains in committee.

The Governor in a statement following the conference, said:

"Generally, the meeting was productive of very definite views on both sides, and in my opinion, opened the way for a satisfactory conclusion."

It was learned the three men to represent labor at the conference next Friday would be Philip Murray, of Pittsburgh, international vice president of the United

HILL TOP STORE HELD UP

Holding the manager at bay with a revolver, a lone bandit early today robbed a store of the Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company at 22 Southern avenue, Mt. Washington, of $84. The manager, R. J. Hoffman, of 136 Cohasset street, was alone. The bandit escaped in an automobile, according to police.

Two gunmen in an automobile late last night held up W. J. Goodall, night manager of the Sun Oil Company's filling station at 7501 Penn avenue and robbed him of $40.

Later two men, believed to be the same pair, stopped Mrs. J. Rosenthal, of 2302 Pittock street, near her home and took her purse.

Thomas Magri, of 6955 Fluerry street, reported to police that a Negro held him up at Thirty-second street and Liberty avenue and robbed him of $41.

Ortiz Rubio Aide Runs for Governor

MEXICO CITY, March 21.—(AP.)—Col. Eduardo Hernandez Chazaro, former private secretary of President Ortiz Rubio, was nominated today by the Vera Cruz Reconstruction party for the governorshop of that state.

Col. Chazaro accompanied the President on his tour of the United States last year.

Art Museum Rembrandts Declared Spurious

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP.)—With the possible exception of "The Guilder," every painting labeled Rembrandt in the Metropolitan Museum of Art is spurious in the estimate of Dr. Maximilian Toch, chemist.

He made this assertion in an address before the New York Microscopical Society at the American Museum of Natural History last night. When asked to comment, Bryson Burroughs, curator of paintings at the Metropolitan, replied: I have nothing to say.

Microscopical, chemical and Xray studies of the canvases had convinced him, Dr. Toch said, that they did not show any traces of the Dutch artist's brush work.

The painting, "Old Woman Cutting Her Nails," was the work of Nicolaes Maes, an understudy of the Dutch artist, he said, and "Pilate Washing His Hands" and "The Artist's Son Titus" were copies by competent students of genuine works.

Dr. John C. Van Dyke, professor of the history of art at Rutgers University, said in 1923 that none of the works then in the museum, highly authenticated as Rembrandts, was genuine.

GOV. ROOSEVELT MAY ALLOW WALKER TO ANSWER CHARGES

EXONERATION SEEN FOR MAYOR

Allegations Same as Those Made During Campaign, Party Leaders Point Out

International News Service

ALBANY, N. Y., March 21.—Democratic leaders at the Capitol today expressed confidence that Gov. Roosevelt would give Mayor Walker an opportunity to answer the the charges filed by the City Affairs Committee demanding his removal.

If Roosevelt submits the charges to Walker Democratic chiefs are certain the Mayor will be able to meet each of the 10 specific allegations in such a way that the Governor will dismiss the entire complaint without further investigation.

CHARGES REVIVED

After carefully studying the complaint filed with the Governor, Democratic leaders have taken the same position as that expressed by Walker that the charges are about the same as those made during the last mayoralty campaign in New York City.

In event that Gov Roosevelt decides to ask Walker what he has to say about the complaint made by the City Affairs Committee, Democratic leaders are certain the Mayor will cut short his California vacation and hasten east to prepare an answer.

Gov. Roosevelt was to leave Albany today to spend the week-end at his home in Hyde Park. It is generally expected that he will have some announcement to make concerning the Walker charges early next week.

SEE PROBE DROPPED

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP.)—Newspapers today indicated there was belief in various quarters that Gov. Roosevelt would not have Mayor Walker's official acts investigated.

The New York American said it had learned on unimpeachable authority that the Governor would not order an investigation because he did not consider the accusations of nonfeasance made by the City Affairs Committee explicit enough or supported sufficiently by specifications.

The Governor will sift the evidence over the week-end at his home in Hyde Park, the paper said, and announce his decision early next week possibly Monday.

The New York Herald Tribune published a dispatch from its staff correspondent at Palm Springs, Cal., to the effect that Mayor Walker feels he has nothing to fear and that the Governor will have no recourse but to vindicate him.

PINCHOT FLAYS GAS TAX 'STEAL'

HARRISBURG, March 21.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot charged last night that the State Revenue Department during the previous administration stood idly by while hundreds of gasoline dealers swindled the state of money due it for liquid fuels taxes. After remarking in his weekly radio talk, that "the public utilities are not the only ones who have been stealing from the people of Pennsylvania," the Governor said:

"In Philadelphia County, with twice as many cars and trucks as Allegheny County, the returns from the gasoline tax were practically the same. What is going on in Philadelphia County is apparently going on in some other counties of Pennsylvania. In Delaware County, 523 stations were investigated and 114 were without permits."

Pinchot said reorganization changes are under way which will insure efficient tax collection. The work he said, is in charge of A. P. Delahunt, of Pittsburgh.

Mine Long Idle, To Resume Monday

BROWNSVILLE, Pa., March 21.—The Lilley Mine, near West Brownsville, will resume operation Monday after being idle for the greater part of the last four years. Three hundred men will eventually be given employment. Capacity production is the ultimate objective of officials.

Coal Police Bill Truce Near

Mine Workers, James Phillips, president of the State Federation of Labor, and Thomas Kennedy, of the anthracite group.

The industries have not expressed their choice.

County Commissioner Charles C. McGovern was one of the speakers at the conference. He talked briefly, it was learned, mostly about the efficiency of police.

SCORES PITTSBURGH POLICE

He commented that "no one will deny that Pittsburgh has the rottenest police system in the country." He expressed no opinion on the bills, but was satisfied that an agreement would come out of the conference.

Gov. Pinchot opened the session and Attorney General William A. Schnader discussed the Musmanno and Wilson bills, the latter the administration measure. He pointed out as one weakness in the Musmanno bill, that it would give the appointive power wholly to the company. The attorney general having no power to appoint, naturally he would have none to discharge any coal and iron policeman, Schnader added.

SEES 'INDUSTRIAL ARMY'

Phillips voiced his opposition to the administration bill, and gave way to Murray, who protested the industrial police system as outlined in the Wilson act. He is quoted as saying:

"The state police force in the past under administrations unfavorable to labor have been partial to the companies and against the workers.

"Under Gov. Pinchot the state police have been fairly impartial. But the state has no right to set up an industrial army, no more than it has to set up an army to protect the workers in their life and liberty."

Murray said he "favored with measure the Musmanno bill."

FAVORS PRIVATE GUARDS

Kennedy expressed his satisfaction with private watchmen. He advocated the abolition of the present system, and pointed out that the watchmen do the job of property protection successfully in the hard coal regions.

Maj. Lynn Adams, superintendent of state police, suggested as an alternative that the state have its police force increased and maintained by a tax levy rather than by coal companies.

The Rev. James R. Cox, of Pittsburgh, played the role of conciliator, and advocated some compromise that would be satisfactory.

He pushed forward the suggestions of the Governor, and said that upon reaching a compromise the Governor would lend his aid.

PRAISES CARNEGIE FORCE

L. H. Burnett, vice president of Carnegie Steel Company, outlined the history of its industrial police system, asserting the concern had over 3,000 acres of industrial plants with normally over 35,000 employes. He said 38 of the company's police force of 203 men have been with the corporation 20 years, 87 for more than 15 years and all over 10 years.

They do other work, such as timekeeping, and never leave the plants in uniform. He pressed the advantage of having a uniformed, disciplined force, not one maintained for strike-breaking. Private watchmen would not be sufficient, he said, because of crimes committed in the plants.

A representative of the Philadelphia and Reading Coal Company explained that its force of 131 men made 60 arrests last year. The police patrol 160,000 acres of coal lands, he said.

UPHOLDS PRESENT LAW

John J. Jackson, counsel for Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, speaking from the standpoint of industry, said the present law was satisfactory to his company. If it is to go, he said, he would favor the Wilson bill. He explained the main trouble his company has is petty thefts, and if the Wilson bill is passed his concern would employ three or four real policemen, with the remainder watchmen.

With Jackson was Maj. J. H. Mair, superintendent of the Westinghouse police.

SEES NEED OF SUBSTITUTE

Gov. Pinchot closed the conference, explaining that while his platform promised to abolish the coal and iron police, there would have to be some substitute. He expressed himself as against violence on either side, but said that if substitute police were not provided, the operators would get deputy sheriffs they could absolutely control, with violence the normal result. He repeated something must be put in the place of the coal and iron police, and said his pledge, approved by the people, would guide him.

The meeting was reported as calm, with the exception of one instance. Three men, who said they were Communists, were granted admission to the conference when they promised Gov. Pinchcot they would remain as spectators. When they began harangues during the meeting, the Governor reminded them of their promise. They continued talking, and Maj. Lynn G. Adams, head of the state police, led them out of the room.

2 Named by Woman Teller Held; Seek Lottery Chiefs

Detectives today were looking for the "higher-ups" in a numbers racket as a result of disclosures by Ida May Ferguson, former teller at the Dormont Savings and Trust Company when she pleaded guilty in Criminal Court yesterday to embezzling $6,000 of the bank's funds.

Three men were named as agents for the lottery, two of whom were arrested a short time later. The other was being sought today. The agents made daily trips to the bank and took money from her for numbers, Miss Ferguson testified.

In the chambers of Judge James H. Gray Miss Ferguson told how she had played the "numbers racket" and named three men. Detectives immediately left the courthouse and later returned with Elmer Hart, of West Liberty and Ray avenues, and S. O. Thomas, of 2899 West Liberty avenue. They will be given a hearing Tuesday at 2 p. m. before Alderman George J. Anderson.

Later the men were said to have admitted to District Attorney Andrew T. Park and Chief George W. Murren, of the county detectives, that they were agents for a lottery operating in the South Hills district. Detectives were furnished with the name of a third man. These men, Miss Ferguson said, sometimes collected as high as $100 a day from her.

After playing the numbers for a time she won $600, Miss Ferguson said. After that she lost rapidly, increasing the amounts almost daily.

She was returned to jail in default of $10,000 bail. Judge Gray said he would postpone sentence.

BALCHEN READY TO HUNT 26 SHIP VICTIMS

Flier Will Scan Ice Packs For Possible Survivors Of Blast Aboard Viking

ST. JOHN, N. B., March 21.—Bernt Balchen and his companions left the airport at Milledgeville this morning and flew to St. John harbor to refuel. They expected to take off for Newfoundland later to search for victims of the Viking explosion.

Despite foreboding weather forecasts, Balchen and two companion fliers were determined to make a final attempt to locate 26 men missing since the explosion on the sealing ship last Sunday.

The American air trio, which included Randy Enslow and Meriam C. Cooper, arrived here yesterday after a speedy flight from Boston. They set out on their rescue mission at the request of Dr. L. F. Frissell, father of Varick Frissell, motion picture producer, of New York, who was aboard the Viking at the time of the explosion and has not been seen since. Another American who remained unaccounted for was A. G. Penrod, cameraman.

TWO BODIES FOUND

Two bodies have been found, accounting for two of the 28 men reported as missing after the disaster.

The aviators will cruise over Horse Island and White Bay, scene of the tragedy, in which some 20 men were killed outright, and scan the ice packs for any possible survivors. They will carry a load of food and medical supplies to drop to inhabitants of the island, who sheltered 127 men after their escape from the shattered ship and the hazardous ice floes.

LITTLE HOPE HELD

The fliers themselves entertained little hope of finding further survivors, but said they would leave no hummock unscanned before giving up their attempt. Balchen said:

"There seems to be only a slight chance that our expedition will accomplish its purpose. The odds, apparently, are against us, but we'll do everything possible."

IMPEACHMENT BILL IN HOUSE

HARRISBURG, March 21.—A new impeachment bill which would give the House of Assembly power to investigate complaints against public officers all over the state was in the hands of the Committee on State Government today. The bill was introduced by Representative Clinton Sowers, of Philadelphia.

The bill not only would set up three special committees to hear such complaints but would give the Governor power to call special sessions at which impeachment proceedings might be brought.

These committees, of nine members each, would hear the complaints of citizens and, if the charges should be deemed meritorious, such a report would be made to the Governor, who could in turn refer the matter to the attorney general for possible prosecution of the public officer in question.

The bill specifies that one committee shall be for the eastern, one for the middle and one for the western district of the state, and the members must reside in the district which their committee serves.

JURY GETS JAIL FAKE CASE SOON

ERIE, Pa., March 21.—(AP.)—With only final arguments to be heard before the rum-smuggling prisoner substitution case is given to the jury, preparations were made today in Federal Court to receive a verdict.

Judge Nelson McVicar was expected to set a time limit in which he would await a decision with the understanding that, should one not be reached in that period, a sealed verdict would be returnable for announcement Monday morning.

James I. Marsh, assistant United States attorney, prepared to make the final address for the prosecution. Defense arguments were to be made by Attorney W. Pitt Gifford and Francis B. Quinn.

The three Erie defendants, Attorney Samuel Y. Rossiter, Joseph Donovan, auto dealer, and Lester Black, are charged with conspiracy to substitute a Buffalo, N. Y., painter, Joseph Warner, in accepting the sentence of another for rum-smuggling. Stanley Wells, the Canadian whom the government contends really was the smuggler, is not in custody.

EMPLOYMENT GAINS SEEN

WASHINGTON, March 21.—(AP.)—Encouraged by new data placing the number of unemployed in January at 6,050,000, but showing more recent signs of business improvement, relief agencies plugged along today in their efforts to keep joblessness at a minimum.

Secretary Lamont estimated that number of persons were out of work, able to work and looking for work the first month of the year. He based his figure on two reports simultaneously issued by the Census Bureau.

Since the special January census was made, Lamont said, there "has been evidence of a slight but unmistakable improvement in the employment situation."

lice station, but released them later without making either charge or report when, he said, Miss Dunn pleaded to go free, declaring, according to Lavery:

"We're very much in love and I don't want him arrested."

They left the station "arm-in-arm," according to Lavery.

"KNEW CLARK"

Miss Dunn declared she was threatened with arrest along with her alleged assailant, if she preferred a charge, and says she pleaded only to be permitted to return home. She avers young Braznell boasted to Lieut. Lavery that he was "a friend of Director Clark's."

Lavery said:

"That would have made no difference to me — I'd have locked him up anyway if I thought an arrest was justified."

He denied that Clark's name was mentioned.

Miss Dunn charged that she was lying on a bed on the second floor in a semi-conscious condition when police arrived, claiming she "came to" with a policeman bending over her.

HOOVER MAY PLEDGE NO TAX RAISE

Plank Rated Strong Weapon In Bid for '32 Election; Government Economizes

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The country may face an increase in federal income taxes to offset anticipated Treasury deficits, but not before the 1932 presidential campaign, it was learned today on Capitol Hill.

The expected deficit of $700,000,000 on July 1, the end of the current fiscal year, will be met by the issuance of short-term certificates, thus postponing the day of accounting. This will postpone a decision on increasing taxes until the end of the next fiscal year, or July 1, 1932.

HOLD DOWN EXPENSE

As that date falls in the midst of the next presidential campaign, political leaders were agreed there could be no increase in federal taxes until after the election.

The administration, meanwhile, will try to hold down expenditures and institute government economies during the coming fiscal year. Administration leaders in the next Congress likewise will strive to reduce the ever-growing appropriations for the following fiscal year ending June 30, 1933. They are hopeful of cutting the annual cost of government far below the $5,300,000,000 figure reached in the session just closed.

MAY PLEDGE NO RAISE

The administration's hope to avoid a tax increase rests largely on the trend of business activity in the next 12 months. A sharp recovery in business would bring greater revenue to the government and might even obviate the necessity for increasing taxes at all.

If there is a marked increase in federal revenues in the next fiscal year, the President may be able to enter his campaign for reelection with a pledge not to increase taxes. He would be armed with a mighty political weapon if this eventuates, and the administration's entire efforts in the next Congress will be devoted toward that goal.

Senator Jones (Rep.), of Washington, chairman of the Senate Appropriations Committee, announced he expected a reduction in appropriations for the fiscal year closing June 30, 1933. He said Congress probably would appropriate $500,000,000 less than at the last session.

BIG DROP IN TAX COLLECTIONS

WASHINGTON, March 21.—(AP.)—Another sharp drop in income tax collections as compared with the same day last year was shown today in the Treasury's statement for March 19, and further increased apprehension of Treasury officials that the total income tax receipts this year would be below the $400,000,000 mark.

Surety Firm Wins In $3,050,817 Suit

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP.)—A $3,050,817.80 law suit, which the reorganizers of the installment note firm of Hare & Chase, of Philadelphia, brought against the National Surety Company three years ago under an ultimate loss bond was decided in favor of the Surety Company by Judge Julian Mack in Federal Court. He permanently enjoined the Hare & Chase reorganizers from prosecuting their claim further in a court of law.

Coolidge Points Out U. S. Obligation to Islands

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., March 21.

To the Editor of the Sun-Telegraph:

The voyage of President Hoover will direct public attention to the importance of our insular possessions. For the most part they came to us as the result of the Spanish War. In population they are about 14,500,000 people. The annual trade with them is more than $550,000,000. This is more than one-tenth of our population and more than one-twentieth of our foreign trade.

Mr. Coolidge

These islands all represent a great public duty that in the course of history has come to the United States to discharge. The people involved for the most part would not be able to make their own way in the world. They have had no experience in self-government except what has been brought to them under our direction. Without some help, without being attached to some country, they could neither repel foreign aggression nor maintain sufficient domestic order to insure any individual freedom. Our purpose is mainly to help them advance economically, intellectually and politically until such time as they can assume entire charge of their own affairs with safety to themselves and other nations. Our duty is plain even if it brings no thanks.

BIRTH CONTROL APPROVED BY FEDERAL CHURCH COUNCIL

FIREMEN SAVED HER DOG

AUDREY LOIS GOLDBERG, 6 . . . . "SPORT" WAS CARRIED OUT!

When Audrey was awakened today in her home, 3202 Ward street, she hustled to safety and escaped spreading flames. Not so with "Sport," her pet. Firemen found him overcome, took him down a ladder.

FIRE ROUTS 3 FAMILIES

Three families were routed shortly before midnight when fire broke out in the basement of a three-story brick dwelling at 3200 Dawson street.

Firemen, responding to two alarms, checked the flames as they were spreading to the top floor of the structure.

Herman Katz, who conducts a grocery on the first floor, was asleep, and his wife about to retire in their living quarters on the second floor, when she discovered the flames. She aroused her husband and fled into the street with him. Firemen rescued "Sport," an Eskimo dog, from a second floor hallway.

Smoke filled an adjoining brick structure at 3202 Dawson street, routing families from the second and third floors. Mrs. Samuel Rosenthal, occupant of the second floor, seized her 6-months-old baby and led her other two children, Adelaide, 5, and Rita, 3, to safety. Barney Courtan and his wife escaped with their two children, Jack, 5, and Dolores, 3.

Damage to the Katz Building was estimated at $2,000 by Chief Richard L. Smith.

Damage estimated at $300 resulted from a fire which broke out in the basement of the two-story frame home of James Ortenzo, at 630 Winfield street, early today.

Fire of undetermined origin near an exit door on the Beatty street side of Motor Square Garden this morning caused damage estimated by firemen at $300.

Lloyd George will present the plan evolved at a larger party conference Tuesday.

Nautilus Commander Certain Sub Can Defy Arctic Waters

SEES NO ICE MENACE IN SUMMER

Danenhower Disputes Critics Fear Ship May Freeze in; Cites Diving Compartment

By LIEUT.-COMMANDER SLOAN DANENHOWER

Former U. S. Navy submarine officer, now commanding Nautilus, in which the Wilkins-Ellsworth trans-Arctic submarine expedition will seek to cross the Arctic Ocean.

MARCUS HOOK, Pa., March 21.—In a recent cable dispatch from London it is noted that a famous submarine constructor, a flag officer connected with submarine development and a commander in the submarine branch are all quoted in effect as stating that no submarine can act as an icebreaker in the Arctic and that if it were able to come to the surface through the ice, it would freeze in solid before its engines were able to recharge its batteries.

This is commenting on the proposed voyage by the submarine Nautilus from Spitzbergen to Alaska by way of the North Pole.

I beg to call attention to the fact that none of the above British experts has ever had any connection with or familiarity with a boat of the type of the Arctic submarine Nautilus.

CITES LAKE'S WORK

As far as we are able to ascertain, no British submarine has ever been equipped with a diving compartment and airlock, which permits the easy ingress and egress of a number of divers while the boat is submerged.

To controvert the fact as stated, that no submarine can act as an icebreaker, attention is respectfully invited to Mr. Lake's Narragansett Bay and with his experiences in the early days in Russian submarines in the vicinity of Libau.

With regard to freezing, there will be no freezing temperatures of water or air in the Polar Sea during the months of July and August. Therefore, the vessel could never be solidly frozen in, as predicted, during the above months.

With regard to the criticism of the hydroplane, wherein it is stated that the boat cannot dive, attention is invited to the fact that the Nautilus has no hydroplanes, but is only fitted with a proper diving rudder.

RIFLE-ARMED STATE POLICE CROWDING INTO JOLIET PENITENTIARY: TENSE WITH POSSIBILITY OF FURTHER RIOTING

JOLIET INQUIRY HEARS CHAPLAIN

International News Service.

JOLIET, Ill., March 21.—The spirit of revolt still was seething within the two state penitentiaries today as the legislative investigating committee waited to hear the testimony of the Rev. George C. Whitmeyer, resigned Episcopalian chaplain. Militiamen still guarded both prisons.

It was the Rev. Whitmeyer who charged that cruel treatment in the prison is common, that the food served the convicts is bad, and that narcotics and liquor have been circulated among the inmates. He resigned shortly before the recent series of riots, denouncing the killing by guards of three escaping convicts as "murder."

The former chaplain will be the first witness to go before the legislative committee at today's session.

Members of the committee today were cognizant of the rebellious attitude of the prisoners after the dramatic interruption of their first hearing, when rioting broke out in a cell block in the new prison at Stateville.

Burned Girl Prays For Life, Spurns Doctor's Aid

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., March 21. — Answering criticisms of physicians here and at Salem, the Rev. R. L. Rouse, pastor of the Church of God here and at Salem, said his daughter, Nichola, 21, was slowly recovering from severe burns suffered March 10 for which no treatment has been given except prayer.

Burned when her dress ignited at a grate fire, the girl has been fighting a gallant battle against death, often being unconscious. She has refused the services of physicians. Doctors say she may not recover and may demand an investigation.

SPRINGARRIVES, RAIN DUE

Cloud-flecked skies, pierced occasionally by bright rays of sunshine, heralded the arrival of spring at 9:07 a. m. today.

Rainy weather may prevail over the first week-end of the new season, early predictions by the Weather Bureau indicated. The temperature — slowly rising — will be warmer.

The arrival of spring brought an end to a winter season that for consistent widespread mildness had few parallels on record.

DREISER CHAMP AFTER SLAPS

NEW YORK, March 21.—(Universal.)—Theodore Dreiser loomed up as a heavyweight champion of American letters today as a result of a bare-fist bout in the exclusive Metropolitan Club with Sinclair Lewis, the Nobel prize winner. The battle was spontaneous. Dreiser slapped Lewis' face twice after Lewis assailed him orally.

The celebrated combatants threw Marquis of Queensberry and London prize ring rules over the rhetorical ropes.

And it was a grudge fight, literally. For years the two outstanding rivals for highest honors in literature had been commending each other professionally and publicly and condemning each other personally and privately.

When they met at a banquet tendered to Boris Pilnyak, Russian writer, in the club Thursday night, Lewis refused to make a speech in the presence of Dreiser whom he charged with plagiarizing Mrs. Lewis' book on Russia or in the presence of two critics whom he accused of belittling him.

EX-CHANCELLOR MUELLER DEAD

BERLIN, March 21.—(AP.)—The hand which, unflinching, wrote the principal German signature to the Treaty of Versailles, was stilled today in death.

Succumbing to a long illness, Dr. Hermann Mueller, twice German chancellor and one of the two or three most influential men of German post-war politics, passed away at 10:45 o'clock last night. He was 54 years old.

He was unconscious several hours preceding the end, which was brought about by thrombosis of the liver, complicated by pneumonia. A bladder operation last Saturday failed to aid him.

Stigmatized by Nationalists for having signed the "war guilt lie," Mueller always had the confidence of the large body of his countrymen, and with the late Dr. Stresemann is given credit generally for having put over the Young Plan and evacuation of the occupied territories. He was leader of the Social Democratic party and a newspaperman by profession.

Auto Driver Dies At Steering Wheel

A victim of a heart attack, J. Frank Standley, 38, of 5163 Woodworth street, was found dead at the steering wheel of his automobile in Center avenue, near Melwood street, last night. A pedestrian, who found Standley slumped over the wheel, summoned police, who took him to Homeopathic Hospital, where he was pronounced dead.

COMMITTEE DIVIDED ON STAND

22 of 28 Members Declare Restrained Methods Valid; See Economic Necessity

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP.)—Birth control through "careful and restrained methods by married people" is approved by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ.

Representing approximately 22,000,000 members of 27 Protestant denominations in America, a majority of the committee on marriage and the home published today a report saying such practice is "valid and moral."

The report, approved by the administrative committee, was signed by 22 of the 28 members of the sub-committee. Three dissented in some respects and three voiced no opinion.

MRS. ROCKEFELLER APPROVES

Those approving includes Mrs. John D. Rockefeller, Jr., a member of the national board of the Young Women's Christian Association; George W. Wickersham, chairman of the commission on law enforcement, and Mrs. John Ferguson, president of the National Council of Federated Church Women.

Those taking some exceptions were the Rev. Dr. Howard Chandler Robbins, chairman of the committee; Mrs. Robert E. Speer, president of the national board of the Y. M. C. A., and Mrs. Orrin R. Judd, president of the Council of Women for Home Missions.

Those remaining neutral were the Rt. Rev. Charles K. Gilbert, suffrage bishep of the Protestant Episcopal Diocese of New York; The Rev. Dr. Ben R. Lacy, president of Union Theological Seminary, at Richmond, Va., and Mrs. W. A. Newell, of Greensboro, N. C.

AGREE ON NECESSITY

The committee unanimously agreed "as to the necessity for some form of effective control of the size of the family."

The causes cited for such necessity included "economic consideration" in poor families and "the problems of over-population."

The report was criticized in statements by the Rt. Rev. John J. Dunn, Roman Catholic vicar general and bishop auxiliary of New York, and by Dr. Frederick H. Knubel, president of the United Lutheran Church in America. The Roman Catholic Church is not affiliated with the Federal Council of Churches, and the Lutheran Church has only a "consultative" membership.

HOOVER'S SHIP OFF FLORIDA

By GEORGE E. DURNO

International News Service.

ABOARD U. S. S. ARIZONA, En Route to Porto Rico, March 21. — The semi-tropical area off Florida entered by the battleship Arizona today on its voyage to the Caribbean Sea made the newly-born spring season pleasantly real for President Hoover and his party, heading for Porto Rico. Flannels appeared as if by magic, and officers changed into spotless white.

President Hoover, contrary to his usual procedure, did not follow any definite schedule of exercise, declaring that this cruise would be strictly vacational, with "no rules." He spent most of his time resting and chatting with officers.

Another attempt will be made sometime during the day to pick up the voice of Herbert Hoover, Jr., who has a home-made radio-telephone set at Asheville, N. C. Amateurs interfered in yesterday's experiment carried out by ship's officers.

Alma Rubens Lived Short Month After Ending Tale of Dope

By ALMA RUBENS

CHAPTER XLIV

Down into the cellar we went, the musty, ill-smelling, dirty cellar that underlies so many of the gorgeous resorts of this sort in New York City.

Out through a cellar door, over a wall, through a backyard, over another wall, I fell and hurt my knee—no time to think of that.

Up and running again, the brown man pulling me along as if I was so much heavy baggage.

Miss Rubens

Finally, scratched and bleeding, my clothes torn, one shoe gone, one silk stocking nothing but a festoon of rags, I stopped a taxi on a dark street.

The brown man helped me into the taxi. I gave him a $10 bill. He smiled, showing his white teeth.

"Get yourself a good shot," I said, "you'll need it."

The brown man shook his head.

"No, thank you, lady," he said, in his soft, slurring voice, "I don't use none of that stuff. I just work in that place, that's all."

Soon after this I went to a party which ended once and for all the way of dope for my tired feet.

By this time I had a little apartment and a girl I will call Frances shared the apartment with me. I was lonely, my money was running out and I liked Frances, so we made up our minds to double up.

Caused Comment

My arrival at the hotel, the night of the raid on the Harlem party caused a good deal of comment. It was about four in the morning when I appeared on the scene, my clothes in rags, my face scratched and torn.

The next morning I was asked to leave the hotel, so I called up Frances and we went into the apartment together.

Frances was on the dope, too.

We tried to keep our daily allowance down as much as we could, but we didn't succeed very well.

The days were sodden nightmares, and the nights were horrible hours of agony.

Every time we were invited to a dope party we went.

One night we went to a fine apartment in Park avenue. Our host was a bachelor, and his place was magnificently done in the Chinese fashion.

"This looks like a smoking party," said Frances. "I do hope it isn't. I've turned against hop. The last time I smoked I was sick for days. Why can't they stick to 'now,' and the good old hypo?"

Frances was right.

After the morphine came the cocaine, and then came the couches and the long pipes and the sweet, sickish smell of cooking opium.

Frances and I slipped away from the party, and went into a room and lay down on the bed, drugged and half senseless.

When we came out of our stupor it was the afternoon of the second day, we rose, put on our coats, stole through the living room, where the rest of the party still lay drugged in opium stupor.

Faded Like Ghosts

We slipped through that haunted, degraded room like two pale ghosts.

"Poor Jane," said Frances, "did you notice her on that divan, in the corner of the room? She looked like a corpse. I don't believe she'll last much longer, do you?"

When I picked up the paper two days after that, I saw poor Jane's name in the head lines, she had jumped out of the tenth story window of a fashionable hotel, and was found crushed in the courtyard below.

Poor Jane. The papers called it an accident.

Jane's father was a man of influence and the police let it go at that.

But everyone who knew her knew that she did not fall out of that window. She jumped, and I envied her the courage which helped her to do it.

I don't know whether it was the whipping party, or the raid on the Harlem den, or the suicide of the girl I knew and almost worshiped, when she was beautiful and innocent, and beloved—but something had happened to me—at last.

I was through!

All through.

No more parties for me. No more pretense at hope or ambition.

Done With Life

I was done with life, done with love, finished even with friendship.

Christmas was coming on—could I manage somehow to get home to California—to die.

That's all I wanted—death, cool, restful death, and oblivion. I would leave behind me my poor feeble attempt at the story of my life.

It might serve to wake unsuspecting people to the danger that lurks, in every alley and in every dark corner, and in a thousand brilliantly lighted places, too, for poor souls who do not realize what they are doing when they take the first "harmless" shot of morphine or the first pleasant little sniff of that innocent looking "snow."

If I could turn one poor soul away from the hideous danger of dope, just one, my poor shattered life would not have been lived in vain.

California—home—my mother. What is it the old verse says:

"Goodby, proud world, I am going home."

Perhaps someone will buy this story of my ghastly failure of a life. If they do I can pay my debts here and escape to rest and peace and home—at last.

Do I dare to speak the name I have so often taken in vain? Do I, a poor wretch, crawling to the foot of the throne for mercy, dare to say:

God pity me, God forgive me, and God, help all poor mortals who fall into the clutches of the monster—Dope.

Editor's Note—Broken mentally, physically and emaciated almost beyond belief, poor Alma Rubens, one of the greatest movie stars of the last generation, and a showgirl friend, left New York on December 15, 1930, the day after she had completed this narrative of her life experiences. She arrived in Los Angeles on December 19, where she was met by her mother and her family physician. Two weeks later Miss Rubens was arrested in San Diego, Cal., on a federal narcotic charge. A quantity of drugs was found in the hem of her dress. She was released on $500 bail and went home. She died of pneumonia on January 21, 1931.

lar bills with a machine that has only 24 pens on it.

Put 48 pens on the gimmick and Andy will soon catch up.

All we need are ideas like that. And prosperity is as easy to start as a Hindu riot.

Anyway, it's the first day of spring. Don't have to buy any more coal, grass is green, all's right with the world and the baby Austin is in the two-car doghouse.

It's the first day of spring and if our congressman thinks we are going to plant that package of seeds he is nutsy.

We're going to eat 'em.

We didn't do so well on the garden last spring. The sparrows sat on the fence and watched where we put each seed.

The minute our back was turned the sparrows nailed the seeds.

Finally, we got smart. We waited until the bird looked the other way. Then we jabbed a seed into the terrace.

It worked. But only for a while. When a man plants a tomato surprise in March or April he wants to know where it is going to be in August.

So you mark off your various vegetables with little signs on sticks. Beans, artichokes, beets, tomatoes and so forth until you meet et cetera.

It's outdoor bookkeeping for you but epitaphs for the seeds.

Also information for the sparrows. They just walk up and down reading the signs like customers in a cafeteria.

When they come to a menu they like they start digging. Crows work a little differently. They just ignore the signs and jab their beaks anywhere. A seed is a seed to a crow.

The next door chickens are also careless but efficient housekeepers. All they want to know is that there are seeds around waiting for the sunshine and the rain to cook 'em.

Having got that small clue they start scratching from east to west. Then they scram from north to south.

And to make sure they haven't missed anything they also come back a third time and claw on the well known diagonals.

Which is why delicatessen stores will never suffer a depression and also why we are going to eat the seeds ourselves. Why should we give a bonus to the sparrows when it was the pigeons who carried the messages during the World War?

SUNSHINE MELLOWS

LUCKIES are always kind to your throat

Everyone knows that sunshine mellows—that's why the "TOASTING" process includes the use of the Ultra Violet Rays. LUCKY STRIKE—made of the finest tobaccos—the Cream of the Crop—THEN—"IT'S TOASTED"—an extra, secret heating process. Harsh irritants present in all raw tobaccos are expelled by "TOASTING." These irritants are sold to others. They are not present in your LUCKY STRIKE. No wonder LUCKIES are always kind to your throat.

The advice of your physician is: Keep out of doors, in the open air, breathe deeply; take plenty of exercise in the mellow sunshine, and have a periodic check-up on the health of your body.

HUNT FOR LOST SEA FLIER FAILS

Two Army planes which flew over the Batanes Islands and the sea north of Luzon in the belief he might have landed in that vicinity returned to Manila this afternoon.

Mrs. Miller Addresses U. D. of C.

The civilization that produced a Washington, a Jefferson and a Lee could not die, its unquenchable, undimmed spirit will always light the sunny South, Mrs. Carroll Miller observed yesterday to Pittsburgh Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, in summing up her review of "The Tragic Era."

Mrs. Miller gave a most comprehensive resume of the Claude Bowers book (which deals with the bitter years of the Reconstruction), interjecting some pertinent remarks of her own as she proceeded. Graft and corruption were more general then than in any other period of American history, she pointed out. Men were guilty of trying to overthrow the government and were kept from impeaching President Andrew Johnson only by the vote of Senator Cowan from Greensburg, who, it developed, was a relative of John Pryor Cowan, whose wife is president of the Pittsburgh chapter.

Tea followed Mrs. Miller's talk, the table decorations being in the Confederate red and white. The meeting was held in the Hotel Schenley.

* * *

A vivid and beautiful description of the Oberammergau Passion Play was given the literature department of the Congress of Clubs yesterday by Miss Suzanne Beatty. The speaker first described the little village "set in a wrinkle of the great hills," and spoke of its warm hospitality and the delight of its old shops. The commercial spirit is entirely lacking, she said, and went on to remark that one must forget all ecclesiastical prejudice and view the Passion Play simply as a great, superb drama.

Besides Miss Beatty's talk there were book reviews by Mrs. Katherine Riggs, Mrs. Jeannette Reisfar and Miss Marie Kennedy. Mrs. Carl E. Coslowsky reported the department's benefit theater party, which netted, in addition to the desired amount for the mortgage, sufficient to pay for a membership in the Five Dollar Club which has been formed to honor Mrs. R. W. Johnston, Congress president, upon her retirement.

The drama department met for luncheon yesterday also and had as guests of honor Robert Fiske and Hugh Banks, of the Pitt Stock Company, who spoke. Mrs. Robert L. Finlayson sang, accompanied by Mrs. H. D. Everett.

* * *

The Rev. Dr. Carl Wallace Petty spoke on "This New World We Live in" when he addressed the Sheraden Woman's Club at its guest day meeting in Sherodd Temple yesterday. Miss Ruth Malcolm, soprano, accompanied by Mrs. J. O. Nesbit, and Miss Virginia Whaley, piano, furnished music. Mrs. A. C. Ackenheil was leader and the social hour was in charge of Mrs. Andrew Magee.

TRANSPARENT ANKEL-LINE ADDS CHARMING TOUCH TO FROCKS

—Sketched in Paris—

Paris Bureau,
Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

PARIS, March 21.—When night comes there is a lightness about the ankles that is very new and charming—considering how ankles have been treated these past few seasons. Many of the new dresses boast a transparent note about the ankle-line that gives an airy touch to the frock, besides being decidedly kind to those pretty feet that have been in strict retirement for so long. We imagine that the dress with a transparent hemline is going to be extremely popular this summer and will swish through the best places at all the leading resorts.

* * *

EXQUISITELY charming is the combination of satin and lace. This must be ever so kindly and skilfully handled, otherwise there will be too much of a bridal frock air to it, especially if it is done in white. And in black it could so easily look tawdry and old, unless similarly treated. Flounces are still an integral part of the silhouette itself and are seen on the very smartest models.

* * *

THE DRAWING is of two very delectable evening frocks that would be welcome additions to even the best stocked wardrobe. The Lenief model (to the left) is of black net with pleasing color accents in the turquoise blue satin shoulder straps and flowers at the belt. The belt is of black cire satin. The diagonal line of the two flounces is most becoming and graceful. An ideal frock for between seasons.

* * *

THE OTHER FIGURE shows a charming Premet frock of ivory white satin with matching silk lace of rather large, heavy design. The extreme richness of the materials lends much elegance to the dress, which, in itself, is really most simple both in cut and detail. The transparent hemline should be noted.

TED LEWIS ON AIR TONIGHT

WE NOW PRESENT

By DARRELL V. MARTIN, Radio Editor

Ann Leaf

Ted Lewis and His Musical Clowns give the Saturday night bill just the pep it needs (WCAE at 7:30). Ted's comedy has always had to be seen to be appreciated, but from what we understand the man of high silk hat and cane has been surrounded with an abundance of funny talent for tonight . . . We told you many days ago that "Sisters of the Skillet" would do a Saturday night stand—and here they are on the Blue network, WJZ at 11:30 . . . Columbia has something mystical in "Atlantic City Entertains"—WJAS at 8:45 but we have a suspicion that it's a trip around the Boardwalk for dance orchestras playing there . . . When the period known as "Poems" was introduced by NBC some weeks ago several of our readers suggested that a little music be injected in the background . . . These letters were forwarded to John Royal, program director, NBC, with the result that we have "Memory Lane" on KDKA at 10:45.

* * *

We feel it our duty to call your attention again to the splendid feature presented by Ben Alley and Ann Leaf, WJAS at 8:15. Let them lull you to sleep on WABC at 12:30 tonight with their exquisite "Nocturne."

* * *

Merlin Aylesworth made a worthy addition to his announcers' staff in Paul Dumont. He is just the man to handle Weber and Fields, Cuckoo and other productions of this type. He is a funny man on a funny job and distinguishes himself admirably.

QUESTION A DAY:

Will the Pittsburgh police radio station have a clear channel? Will we be able to hear it?—Louise L., Carnegie.

Answer.—Wavelength of 1712 kilocycles same as police stations in Chicago, Cincinnati, Dallas, Indianapolis, St. Louis, Pasadena, Cal. If you are hearing any of these now you will be able to pick up Pittsburgh.

* * *

Hon. James Francis Burke is our pick of all radio orators.

* * *

When he steps into a studio he takes brush and palette with him and skillfully paints mental pictures. His vivid delineation of the unemployment situation last night was not only comprehensive but decidedly convincing.

* * *

Expression perfect, enunciation distinct—his sentences strike out like anvil blows.

* * *

The moment he finishes a radio talk the telephone jingles in the studio. It's his daughter, Frances, calling to deliver her criticism. And even "Daddy," powerful as the powers-that-be and in a class by himself as a speaker, gives an ear to what she has to say.

STUDIO LIGHTS

Joe Sartory stopped in to say everything's OK at Oil City where he's now announcing for WLBW . . . looks fine and has the same smile, chuckle . . . Irene Bordoni is temperamental, uses two mikes . . . Charley Horn interviews Hellmut, the German announcer-adventurer, over W8XK tomorrow afternoon at 4:30 . . . the Boswell Sisters entertain on KDKA next Wednesday night . . . We have often meant to boost Lannie Ross for his "Troubadour of the Moon" . . . Baby Rose Marie is to be heard on WCAE at 5 o'clock with the Tea Timers starting Monday . . . The wig-wag signal system has passed out at NBC studios . . . The announcer now writes his message on a telautograph machine at his elbow and the words are reproduced on another machine in the operator's room.

BURNED STATE BUILDING SAFE

HARRISBURG, March 21 (AP).—Doubt as to rigidity and safety of the structural steel and floors exposed to the recent fire in the new Library and Education Building being erected in Capitol Park was removed by James F. Malone, secretary of property and supplies.

At a conference of the architect and consulting engineers in Malone's office, it was revealed physical and chemical tests by experts had shown the structural steel work and floors unharmed by the fire which swept the interior of the building last October 3.

Malone said the inspection had shown the elevator cables only slightly injured, but that rather than take risk he had ordered all elevator cables replaced.

The extent of the fire damage was estimated at $750,000.

Woolworth Company Seeks Tax Refunds

NEW YORK, March 21. (AP.)—Claiming to have paid excess income tax in 1922, 1923, 1924 and 1925, the F. W. Woolworth Company filed suit to recover $558,704 from the United States Government.

The company contended it overstated its net taxable income, having failed to deduct amounts paid in foreign taxes as allowed under the law. The company also seeks interest on the alleged overpayment and trial costs.

Approximately 6,000 other applications from those aided by the relief agencies previously, were on file.

Ax-Slayer Doomed For Killing Wife, 16

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., March 21 (AP.)—Lawrence Johnson, confessed ax-slayer of his 16-year-old wife, was convicted of first degree murder by a Vigo Circuit Court jury which recommended the death penalty be imposed. Judge John P. Jeffries will pass formal sentence on Johnson March 27, and set a date for his execution in the electric chair at the Indiana State Prison at Michigan City.

Johnson's attorneys indicated they will appeal. The defense pleaded insanity.

JUDGE INSISTS MAN GET LASH

BALTIMORE, March 21.—(AP.)—A criminal court jurist refused to suspend a sentence of 10 lashes at the whipping post imposed on John Kowalski, 40, blacksmith, convicted of wife beating. The sentence, the judge indicated, would be carried out in the city jail in a few days.

Neighbors of Kowalski appeared before the court with a petition, signed by housewives in the neighborhood, asking the lashes not be inflicted.

The judge, however, agreed to strike out a 30-day jail sentence and said Kowalski will be released, as soon as the whipping order has been carried out. Kowalski will be the second man lashed in Maryland in 11 years.

In making their plea, friends said Kowalski had frequently been beaten by his wife in the last 17 years. They termed the sentence a miscarriage of justice.

LANG SPURS JOB TO OPEN ROAD

The Mt. Washington roadway, closed Thursday after boulders and shale fell on the driving surface from hillsides above, may be opened to traffic tonight.

An extra force of workmen was put on this job today by the Department of Public Works, it was announced, to remove the loose shale and debris.

Director Edward G. Lang said the dry weather would give the workmen an opportunity to get the rock cleared up and to prevent further occurrences. Rain or snow may cause delays, he declared.

Motorists have been using the Liberty Tunnels to Boggs avenue to reach Mt. Washington since Lang ordered the roadway to Grandview avenue, roped off.

Bogus License Rumor Found False

Reports that counterfeit operators' licenses have been circulated to motorists in Pennsylvania were found to be false by officials of the Pittsburgh Motor Club, it was announced today. Benjamin G. Eynon, registrar of motor vehicles, said the apparent difference in cards is due to the use of a new set of numbering machines. A new kind of type is used with black ink in place of blue. The new machines and ink were substituted after part of Pennsylvania's 2,000,000 drivers' cards had been stamped.

PARLEYS IN TWO STRIKES SET

Labor leaders and employers will attempt next week to settle disputes between two unions and employing contractors. A conference will be held Monday night in the Builders' Exchange, Fulton Building, when the wage controversy of District Council No. 1, Brotherhood of Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers of America, will be taken up. The union declined a cut of $2 daily, which would bring wages down to $10.

A meeting will be held Wednesday, when leaders of Local No. 37, Composition Roofers' Union, will attempt to settle a dispute of 100 of their members who quit work yesterday. The union charges that the trouble was the result of employers sending workmen out of town and refusing to pay their living expenses.

Official to Speak At Railways Meet

"Present Day Transportation" will be the subject of an address by M. J. Gormley, of Washington, executive vice president of the American Railway Association, at the monthly meeting of the Railway Club of Pittsburgh, in the Fort Pitt Hotel next Thursday night. The meeting will follow a dinner scheduled for 6 p. m.

175,000 IN PA. ASK DRY CHANGE

WASHINGTON, March 21.—(AP.)—One hundred and seventy-five thousand residents of Pennsylvania have been pictured as favoring prohibition modification to permit light wines and beer. In a report from the Congressional Districts Modification League, the league said that number of 250,000 persons interviewed in two years had signed a national petition urging modification of the Volstead Act restrictions.

Eastern offices of the organization are in Philadelphia, and George W. B. Fletcher, of that city, is vice president.

Man Held as Slayer Of Boarder in Home

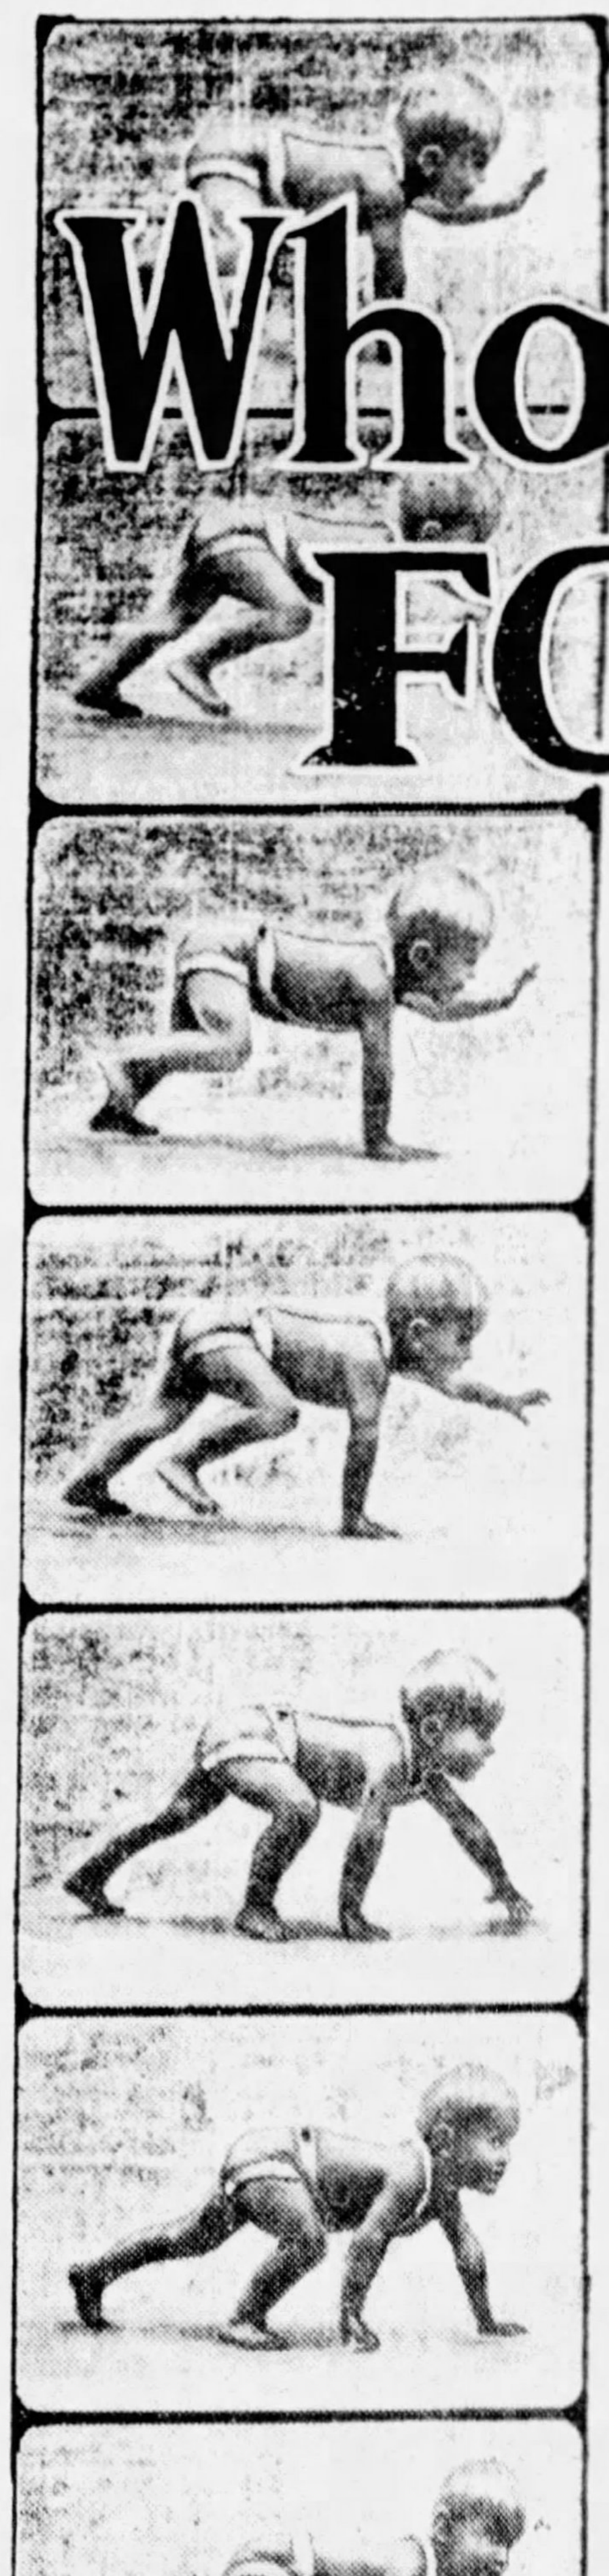
A DIURETIC FOR THE KIDNEYS

Motion Picture Record of How a Child Runs on All Fours.



Children Who RUN ON "ALL FOURS" like a bear!

NOT all babies creep. Some travel on "all fours." They take to it naturally, and go very fast. Some run faster than their parents can walk and much faster than any children can creep.

A study of these little "quadrupeds" has been made by a modern scientist, and the high spots of his findings are set forth in an article appearing in next week's American Weekly.

If you have a baby who runs on "all fours," waste no worry on him. Most such babies are brighter than average, and all of them eventually learn to walk upright. Their early style of travel, called scientifically a reversion to the habits of our remote, pre-human ancestors, is forsaken with their babyhood.

"Public Improvements Promote Progress"

Bull Creek Bridge No. 3, completed during 1930, is located 2½ miles northwest of Tarentum on Bull Creek Road in Fawn Township. This bridge replaces an existing structure which had been the source of accidents, and the project included the relocation of 950 feet of road to eliminate this condition. It is a plate girder deck bridge, approximately 70 feet long, carrying a 26-foot roadway with a 6-foot sidewalk on the upstream side. The contract was awarded to the Union Engineering and Construction Company on July 8, 1930, the contract price being $41,443.00. The source of funds was the 1928 Peoples Bond Issue.

REPORTS SHOW LOW POINT PASSED

Statistics Give Evidence That Employment Upturn Is More Than Seasonal

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER,
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Signs are accumulating that from the human standpoint the worst of the business depression is behind us.

Frank A. Vanderlip once wisely remarked to me that prosperity consists in the full employment of labor at high effective wages.

Mr. Rukeyser

Mr. Vanderlip's enlightened definition goes to fundamentals, and leaves no room for the proposals of astigmatic bankers, who think that the way out of the economic tangle lies in a deliberate lowering of the American standard of living.

President Hoover has stood firmly for a maintenance of the American standard. He departed from a prepared speech at Cleveland, last October, at the convention of the American Bankers Association to rebuke a northwestern financier who had remarked that the American standard of living was relatively too high.

The Chief Executive is cheered by the fact that last month for the first time in a year the employment figures showed a change in the right direction. In commenting on the same figures, the Standard Statistics Company concludes:

"Evidence is accumulating that January marked the low point in employment, and that seasonal trends will be influential in progressively increasing the number of employed during the spring and early summer."

The report by the Labor Statistics Bureau of the Department of Commerce and the Federal Labor Service that the increase in factory employment in February was more than seasonal is distinctly encouraging.

Radio Apparatus Exports Increase

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Showing a strong upward tendency, exports of radio apparatus from the United States during January, 1931, surpassed the total for the corresponding month of last year, despite a decrease in the majority of other classes of electrical equipment, according to the Commerce Department's electrical division.

Foreign shipments of radio apparatus totaled $1,672,904 during January, 1931, as compared with $1,523,207 in the corresponding month of 1930. Radio receiving sets alone registered a gain of over half a million dollars, from $562,444 in the 1930 month to $1,075,814 in 1931.

EVANS SCHOOL TOASTMASTER

United States Attorney Raymond D. Evans will be toastmaster at the annual banquet and dance of Pittsburgh School of Accounting, which is to be held March 28, in the Fort Pitt Hotel.

Mr. Evans, a member of the school's faculty, is a well-known speaker and should be a very able introducer of such features as Tampa, the English court magician; Richard Elvis, baritone, formerly with the Minneapolis Symphony Orchestra, and Charles B. Couchman, C. P. A., president of the American Institute of Accountants, who will talk about "The Life of an Accountant."

Real Estate

The Porter & MacDowell Company, downtown brokers, has leased for the Manchester Auto Machine Company a one-story building at 920 Manchester boulevard to the Hunter Machinery Company. The building contains a large showroom and service facilities which the machinery company will use for the sales and service of heavy road building equipment. The lease is for a term of years and cost approximately $30,000, according to the brokers.

The J. H. Aronson Company and the W. B. Lawton Real Estate Company have sold for William M. and Mary L. Hollenbeck to C. C. and Ida M. Waugeman a two-and-a-half-story house at 1016 Sheffield street, Twenty-first Ward, for $7,500. The lot fronts 23½ feet on Sheffield street and extends back 90 feet to an alley. The purchasers bought the property for a residence.

A home in Shadeland avenue, Twenty-seventh Ward, has been purchased by Earl W. Hunnell from Sara Liberto for a consideration of $6,950. The lot measures 50x82 feet.

Bills to assure the professional qualifications and honesty of real estate dealers by licensing them have been introduced in the Legislatures of seven states. Pennsylvania already has a real estate brokers' license law. It is estimated that 65 per cent of the people of the United States are living in communities where the licensing of realty dealers is in force. The Legislatures that will vote on the bills this year are Connecticut, Indiana, Maryland, Minnesota, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Oklahoma.

A new home in Crystal drive, Mt. Lebanon, has been sold by W. A. Bode & Co., builders, to Elmer E. E. Stewart, for a private consideration. The lot is 44x170 feet. The same builders have sold a building lot in the Sunset Hills plan to Sadie D. Taylor.

Applications for building permits follow:

Fifth Ward—A. O. Bell, frame addition, 26 Emmett street, $800.

Seventh Ward—Forest Taylor, fire damage, 6200 Penn avenue, $10,000.

Eleventh Ward—Fidelity Trust Company, alterations, 130 North Highland avenue, $500.

Twelfth Ward—S. F. Schweitzer, enclosed porch, 711 Lemington avenue, $250.

Fourteenth Ward—E. J. Emery, brick addition, 6511 Darlington avenue, $4,000.

Twenty-seventh Ward—A. G. Gabosch, frame addition, 3541 Laird street, $1,000.

Twenty-ninth Ward—W. Recker, repair fire damage, 2103 Hazeldale street, $400.

TRADE ACTIVITY SHOWS TREND UPWARD

Demand Broadens in Some Retail Trade Branches; Collections Unimproved.

Trade activity continues to show a slight upward trend and there has been a broadening of demand in several branches of retail trade this week, according to R. G. Dun & Co.'s Weekly Review. The volume of business was stimulated to some extent by special sales and extensive advertising.

The demand for men's and women's wearing apparel has increased slightly at wholesale, but warmer weather is needed to create a more normal movement. There has been a slight improvement in the sale of hardware in seasonable lines, and the movement of furniture and carpets is also slightly better.

AUTO SALES GAIN

Sales of new automobiles have shown a slight improvement and used cars are also moving more freely. Jobbers of groceries and provisions report business slightly better, but still considerably lower than normal.

Building construction has not increased to any material extent, although work in that line is expected to increase next month. There is no particular improvement in the demand for lumber and building materials.

GAS PRICE DOWN

Production of crude oil again shows an increase, and prices paid to producers have been reduced on several grades, with gasoline prices at retail down two cents in this district. Production of bituminous coal continues at a rate about 20 per cent lower than a year ago at this time, with no improvement in demand.

There has been but little change in the collection situation in this district, jobbers reporting the average still slow and retail and installment collections have not shown any particular improvement.

RECIPE EDITOR SORTS ENTRIES

The Sun-Telegraph's macaroni-spaghetti contest, closing at noon today, found the contest editor trying to dig himself out from a pile of recipes which poured into his office by the hundreds. Recipes were received from points within a radius of several hundred miles.

Now begins the huge task of sorting out the recipes, reading them and actually preparing those dishes that seem to merit experimentation.

The prize winners will be announced in the Sun-Telegraph next Friday, and some of the prize winning recipes will be published that day. More of the prize recipes will be published, together with photographs of the prize winners in the spring issue of the Sun-Telegraph Cook Book, Sunday, April 12.

Contest Rules

1—Each contestant may submit as many recipes as she wishes, calling for macaroni or spaghetti.

2—A part of the wrapper of a package of any brand must be enclosed with your recipe.

3—Write on one side of the paper only. Be sure your name and address are on each sheet of paper you submit. This is important.

4—Mail recipes to Macaroni Contest Editor, care of the Sun-Telegraph.

5—The contest closes at noon on March 21.

6—The names of the winners will be announced soon after that date. The prize-winning recipes also will be published.

LUMBER TRADE TO HOLD MEET

CHICAGO, March 20. — The twenty-ninth annual meeting of the National Lumber Manufacturers' Association will be held at Chicago, April 22, 23 and 24, with a plan for the continuation of organized lumber trade activity as the most important topic for consideration.

The business depression now believed to be drawing to a close marks the end of an industrial period and the beginning of a new one, it is pointed out by economists. A salient phase of the new epoch will be more intense competition than characterized the last decade. It will be a period of lower and descending general price levels, narrower margins of profit and greater rivalry. It will be marked by increasing favor for research and merchandising genius and the administration of business on the basis of scientific facts.

BUSINESS FADS AND FANCIES

—By JOHN H. VAN DEVENTER—

Commenting on the fact that new products have sold well during the past year, whereas many of the "old reliables" have been slipping, a manufacturer writes me that he believes adults, however wise and sophisticated, are really children at heart. They like new things to play with. The appeal of the new is a strong one. It affects the man who is buying machinery for a great manufacturing plant and the woman who is purchasing shoes or clothing.

Yes, even our hard headed captains of industry are vulnerable in this respect. Witness the rise and fall of business fads and fancies.

Twenty-five years ago the "system" fad spread through business and industry like a forest fire. A new profession of business doctors sprang up almost overnight. It became the fashion to employ men who knew nothing about your business to come and show you how to run it. These people made business good for printers and paper manufacturers, for their chief aim seemed to be to tie everything up in red tape with a multiplicity of written forms of all colors of the rainbow. It was a case of system for system's sake, not for the sake of the business.

Ten years later if you suggested the employment of a "systematizer" to the average business man, he would very likely show you politely to the door. Next came the "efficiency" craze, with a new crop of specialists called efficiency engineers. That word, too, is about taboo nowadays.

"Scientific management" was presented to industry as a highly detailed plan for extracting the last ounce of profits from manufacture. I have been through most of the plants in which it was installed and find that it would be difficult, even for its parents, to identify the remains today.

The charting of statistics of all sorts is quite the rage now. Some one has remarked that the average employer has to look at so many charts that he hasn't time to get acquainted with his workmen.

Just before the stock market crash, the matter of business forecasting was booming.

It's not so "hot" now, for with all of these high-powered economic telescopes that were peering into the future, scarcely anyone saw what was coming.

After all, brains and elbow grease have no substitute in business and industry. Too bad we can't make a fad of them.

TAKES 3 DAYS TO MAKE CAKE

Two men worked three days to model 200 pounds of sugar into a facsimile of the Stanley Theater. The miniature reproduction was made by Max Spotch and John Gray, foreman baker at Rhea's Bakeries, in Pittsburgh, and is on display on the mezzanine floor of the Stanley.

Thirty-two cakes were consumed by Stanley patrons in the week of the Warner Brothers' celebration of the third anniversary of the Stanley. One cake was distributed following each of the four daily performances and 12 cakes were consumed on Saturday.

The celebration was inaugurated by a noon automobile parade through the downtown business district. Beauties of the Stanley chorus and visiting guest stars helped Dick Powell distribute the huge birthday cake.

A two-tiered cake 65 inches long, 26 inches wide, 2 feet high and illuminated by 42 candles reposes on the Stanley organ this week. It is Dick Powell's second anniversary cake.

STEEL PRICE SITUATION CLOUDED

Stiffening of Prices April 1 Called Belated Because Of Recent Heavy Demand

By B. E. V. LUTY.

With statements made in the last few days that bars, shapes and plates are to be advanced $1 a ton April 1, an announced advance of $2 a ton in wire products, continued doubt as to whether recently inaugurated attempts to advance strip prices will succeeed, and reports of fresh shading in sheets, the steel price situation presents a decidedly mixed appearance. Furthermore there is continued lack of definite evidence that the irregular if not erratic concessions made at times last year on large lots of plain shapes for fabricated structural steel jobs have been harmonized into the regular and moderate concessions to which this trade has always considered itself entitled.

One might suppose that the large increase that has occurred in steel demand, promising to make this month's output 50 to 60 per cent over the December rate as estimated a week ago, would have justified earlier, broader and more successful efforts to advance prices on those steel products that needed advances to avoid losses to producers.

RISE NOT HELD

When the irregular lines were stabilized in the fore part of December, hopes were entertained that this stabilization would quite shortly be followed by advances in several lines, but circumstances did not prove propitious. There was a dollar a ton advance in bars, shapes and plates January 1, it is true, but there had been covering at the old price and reports have indicated that only on bars has the advanced price been holding fully on current business.

In the Chicago district the advance did not hold altogether even on bars. The further advance now announced for April 1 may be called belated, as former custom would have made it appear before the middle of March and to apply ostensibly at least to ordinary deliveries to be made after March 31. In the case of strips, former prices still rule on prompt orders, affording buyers opportunity to secure some deliveries after March 31 at old prices, and while some contracts have been written at the advanced prices their effectiveness will depend on the prompt market advancing. As to the $2 a ton advance in wire products it has received no crucial test thus far and buyers do not seem to take it very seriously.

OBSTACLES MET

There have been considerations making it more difficult than might be supposed to advance prices. In the first place, while a 50 to 60 per cent increase in steel production seems large, it is figured upon a very low rate, for steel ingot production in December was at only about 24,200,000 tons a year, 60 per cent of the average rate in 1930, and 44 per cent of 1929, the banner year in steel. Furthermore, there is the matter of capacity, increased greatly during the war, and somewhat in subsequent years, while the increase last year and this is particularly large. The last official ascertainment was for December 31, 1929, showing 63,067,000 tons of all classes of steel ingots per annum. It is easier to estimate prospective capacity, before the end of this year, than to estimate capacity at the moment, for there is no adequate information as to how much of the new construction is effective.

That is only a technical difficulty, however, for one is here dealing with the steel market as a market. Markets are made by sellers and buyers and the individual seller is thinking in terms of the capacity he is going to have, on which he has spent money or is spending money and he wants to build up and provide as much patronage as possible for that capacity. Prospective capacity, presumably to be available before the end of this year, is probably not under 69,000,000 tons, and it is a detail of no market significance just where, between the 63,000,000 tons of December 31 and the prospective 69,000,000 tons, capacity is on any particular date meanwhile.

GERMAN TRADE TONE BETTER

WASHINGTON, March 21.—While industrial and trade activity in Germany is now holding fairly steady at the low level of the current depression with no concrete evidence of any major improvement, business psychology has shown a more optimistic tone during the past month, according to a radiogram received in the Department of Commerce from Commercial Attache H. Lawrence Groves, Berlin. There is a distinct increase in confidence that the worst has passed and that a gradual improvement may be expected by summer, or autumn at the latest. Increased activity and a strong improvement in the stock and bond markets reflect the more confident business attitude. This is strengthened by the favorable political outlook, approval for the new International Mortgage Bank, the prospect of a sanification in Berlin finances through a large long term loan based on the concession of the municipal electric works to foreign bankers and the anticipation of a substantial increase in Russian orders during 1931.

The continued acute shortage of investment funds threatens to perpetuate the present severe depression in all building and construction lines, and offers a serious handicap to a business revival. A buyers' holiday is still apparent, indicating the necessity of a further reduction in consumer prices commensurate with the sharp reductions in manufacturers' prices already made in most lines. The first postwar decline in German wage rates was effected during the last six months and averaged between 5 and 8 per cent; the different industrial unions are now offering strenuous opposition to further cuts.

Jersey Standard Reduces Kerosene

NEW YORK, March 21.—Standard Oil Company of New Jersey has reduced tank car price of kerosene ½ cent a gallon to 6 cents at all seaboard points, except Charleston, where the price was reduced ¼ cent a gallon to 5¼ cents.

HARRISBURG, March 21. (AP.)—The State Board of Finance and Revenue announced it had allowed a refund of $3,830 on the 1929 loans tax to the Jefferson Railroad Company of New York.

Municipal: Mahanoy City, Schuylkill County, $832, on 1929 loans tax.

Inheritance: Estate of James Devitt, Northumberland County, $924; estate of Conrad Klein, Berks County, $1,288.

The corporation and municipal refunds were made by crediting these amounts on the books of the commonwealth, while the inheritance tax refunds were in cash returns.

JAPAN IMPORT TRADE GAINS

WASHINGTON, March 21.—No general relief from depression is indicated in reports to the Department of Commerce, but a few encouraging developments have occurred. In Japan the import trade became more active during February. Some increase in inquiries from Europe and the United States for Chinese products has been reported. Foreign piece goods stocks are scarce in India. Buoyancy continues to characterize the Australian wool market, with Japanese purchases heavy. Business activity in the Netherland East Indies has improved slightly, owing to depletion of stocks. The Philippine textile market has improved slightly.

The recent improvement in Argentina did not continue into March, owing to unprecedented heat. Brazilian coffee shipments declined to normal last week, with prices slightly firmer; general business remains depressed.

Business depression in France was further accentuated during February, with unemployment rising sharply. A more optimistic tone is developing in Czecho-Slovakia, and the business decline seems to have been checked. Norwegian business became increasingly difficult during February. Business conditions, especially in the wholesale trade, continue to improve slowly in Canada.

WASTE PAPER GROUPS JOIN

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Waste Paper Institute and the waste paper division of the National Assocation of Waste Material dealers were merged under the name of the Waste Paper Institute at the annual convention of the national association held in Chicago this week. The merger, which was effected at one of the largest attended sessions at any convention of the national association, has consolidated all the principal units of the waste paper industry into one organization, representing an industry whose annual volume of business is estimated at $100,000,000. The Waste Paper Institute will hereafter function as a division of the national association, with full autonomy and independence of action over all matters affecting the waste paper industry.

Newell J. Lewis, Pittsburgh, was elected chairman of the new organization. Other officers include the following, David Charak, St. Louis, vice chairman; John Winter, Cleveland, secretary-treasurer. The executive board will consist of the above officers and the following: Robert Graham, Boston; Ezra Short, Buffalo; Andrew Castorino, New York; William McGarrity, Philadelphia; Nathan Kurtz, Pittsburgh; Stuart Sutphin, Cincinnati; Samuel Cohen, Omaha; Samuel Levine, Detroit; M. Pushker, Chicago; Robert Johnston, St. Louis; I. Mautner, Cleveland.

Speculative Prospects Seen in Trusts

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

INVESTORS AND SPECULATORS in securities have a tendency to follow fashions with a blindness equal to women's worship of modes in dress. Almost every year sees some unreasonable prejudice either in favor of a particular type of security or against a certain class of investment.

At the apex of the bull market for stocks no price seemed too high to pay for investment trust securities of the management type. The stocks of many management trusts sold for twice the value of the underlying securities and there was no shortage of buyers. After the collapse in stocks, when it became obvious that the highly press agented managements of investment trusts were just as liable to error as any mere mortals, investment trust securities sold for much less than their liquidating values.

The idols of infallible management were shattered. They were relegated to limbo along with the theories about a new era in business. An investment fashion had come and gone. Instead of selling at a premium, investment trust stocks were quoted at a discount.

Broad Powers Granted

IN THIS DISCUSSION management trusts should not be confused with fixed trusts. Management investment trusts are corporations organized to own the stocks or bonds of other corporations. Usually the managements have broad powers to buy and sell securities at will and to use the corporation's funds in any way which promises to yield a profit.

In their operation the management trusts show almost no relationship to fixed trusts in which not only the securities but the numbers of shares of each stock are definitely prescribed. In addition to having complete freedom to buy or sell securities, the officials of management trusts declare dividends only at their own discretion after the manner of other corporations. Fixed trusts pay all their earnings to shareholders.

Selling at a Discount

JUST AS THE MANAGEMENT trust stocks were selling at excessive values in the summer of 1929, when they were at the height of investment fashion, most of them are now selling at unreasonably depressed prices. Losses shown in investment portfolios of stocks during the bear market and the failure of most of the trust managements to anticipate the change in conditions have given investors such a shock that the management trusts are still under a pall of doubt. This is in spite of the fact that many of the trusts, with all their mistakes, have shown less depreciation in the value of their holdings than the average decline in stock prices.

An unreasonably large premium was being paid for management two years ago. At present these same managements are considered to be liabilities, judging from the prices of management trust stocks. Except in a few cases, where dishonesty has been uncovered, the greatest fault of these managements was a failure to forecast the break in stock prices. While the ability of these managements did not come up to the extravagant claims made at the time the trust stocks were first offered to the public, there is no reason to believe that the majority of them actually should be considered to be liabilities.

Recovery Expected

IT SEEMS QUITE LOGICAL to expect that, in the future, the management investment trust stocks will more closely reflect the actual values of underlying securities than they do at present. Eventually the market for investment trust stocks may be expected to recover from the violent reaction against excessive values placed on them in the past. If such a change takes place, this class of stocks will experience an upward movement which will bring them into line with the values of underlying securities. It is even possible that they may eventually sell at a slight premium.

Electric Power Output Declines

NEW YORK, March 21. — The power output of the electric subsidiaries of the American Water Works and Electric Company for February totaled 137,301,316 kwh., a decrease of 11 per cent from the output of 153,736,775 kwh., for the corresponding month of 1930.

For the two months ended February 28, 1931, power output totaled 286,588,838 kwh., 12 per cent less than the output of 325,605,555 kwh., for the same period last year.

Plan Attack on Bethlehem Bonus

NEW YORK, March 21—The Bethlehem Steel Corporation stockholders protective committee has mailed a letter to 85,000 stockholders protesting the bonus system of the corporation and seeking proxies to contest the system at the forthcoming annual meeting next month.

Refutes Unstability Of Business Women

NEW YORK, March 21. — Charges that women employes are "unstable"—that is, that they do not stick to their jobs as well as men—are apparently unjustified, according to statistical studies made by Harry Dexter Kitson for the Woman's Home Companion.

The studies also show that married women make better employes than single ones. A survey of the saleswomen in an important department store indicated that 50 per cent of them were married. Figures of sales and other records of the two groups proved that the married saleswomen were better assets to the store than the unmarried ones. They sold more goods, were more regular in attendance and maintained better health than the single girls. These conditions, Mr. Kitson believes, also obtain in other lines of work.

VIRGINIA MANOR DEVELOPMENT

At Virginia Manor, new Mt. Lebanon realty development, several carloads of new shrubbery are planted each year. Notable among these shrubs are the different varieties of flowering cherries and crabs.

Visitors to the tidal basin at Washington in cherry time see the distinction to be added to one's grounds by collective planting of these small trees. A wide range of color is obtainable from white through the various shades of pink to dark red. An equally wide selection is afforded in the flowering crabs.

Both the cherry and crab trees are absolutely hardy in Western Pennsylvania and once planted become landscape features for a lifetime.

BUSINESS INDEX HIGHER

NEW YORK, March 21. — The Ides of March have come and gone without furnishing any further unfavorable omens from the economic oracles or throwing any new light on the outlook either. Slow but steady seasonal improvement continues undisturbed by new developments, says The Business Week in its report covering the week ended today.

Steel production, supported by diverse short-range demand, is rising to its spring peak at somewhat more than its usual seasonal rate; and building is beginning to reflect the strong stimulus of public works contracts. Check payments show the effects of abnormally high government financial turnover. Other indicators continue monotonously horizontal, and domestic textile activity is apparently tapering off a bit.

The index has risen again above the level of recent weeks, to 81.1 per cent for the week ended March 14, where it was early in the year. This compares with 79.7 per cent in the preceding week and 95.2 per cent in the corresponding week last year.

Commodity price movements are encouragingly indefinite, as in March last year, but the spectacular strengthening of silver and an advance in steel are possibly significant.

U. S. to Investigate Jewelry Problems

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Detailed case studies of the distribution costs and problems of a number of wholesale jewelry distributors, as an aid in the development of more efficient merchandising methods within the industry as a whole, are shortly to be begun by the merchandising research division of the U. S. Commerce Department, according to H. C. Dunn, chief of the division, who is directing the work. These studies, which are being undertaken at the request and with the co-operation of the National Wholesale Jewelers' Association, represent an extension of the general survey of wholesale practices in this industry previously announced by the Commerce Department.

Debeers Plans Big Debenture Issue

LONDON, March 21.—Debeers Consolidated Mines, Ltd., is creating an issue of £2,500,000 5½ per cent debentures, redeemable in 25 years, the purpose of which is to acquire a large interest in new Jagers Fontein Mining and Exploration Company, consolidated diamond mines of Southwest Africa Company, Ltd., and Cape Coast Exploration Company, Ltd., from Anglo-American Corporation of South Africa, Ltd., and Barnato Bros. No public issue will be made, but £2,414,705 will be issued at par to Anglo-American Corporation and Barnato Bros.

GLASS TRADE SENTIMENT BETTER

More Plentiful Orders Seen for Early Future; Plate Market Is Firm

Although there has been but little change in the amount of new business being booked by the manufacturers of the various kinds of sheet glass, it is believed that the time is not far distant when orders will become more plentiful, according to National Glass Budget. Other industries that are influenced by construction work are becoming more active. Sentiment in the steel industry is more optimistic.

What is said to be a record-breaking structural steel contract was awarded just recently. Orders for various kinds of materials used in new construction work, as well as for remodeling buildings, are said to be on the increase. With the arrival of spring there should be some pick-up in the sheet glass business.

Due to the continued activity in the automobile industry the demand for plate glass is holding up. During February, which was a short month, domestic production of polished plate glass totaled 8,881,520 square feet. It is understood that orders placed with the manufacturers are just about equal to the production. The distributing trade and the mirror industry are not taking a seasonable average amount of plate glass. The market is firm, with production almost 10 per cent under what it was a year ago.

Factory output of window glass is at an extremely low figure. An estimate is that production is running near to a monthly rate of 350,000 boxes. This is partially due to tank trouble that developed. One of the largest tanks in the United States had to be closed down for a period of several weeks while block trouble was being repaired. A second tank which has been operating for quite a while was closed down for cold repairs and a third tank was out of production during the week for hot repairs. Another tank is reported to have closed down for an indefinite period. It is many years since there was such a small amount of window glass being manufactured at the middle of March.

SOVIET FOREIGN TRADE GROWS

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Soviet Russia's purchases increased to a greater extent than her exports during the past Soviet fiscal year (ending September 30, 1930) according to official Soviet foreign trade statistics received in the Commerce Department.

Total imports into the Soviet Union were valued at approximately $53,400,000 during the 1929-30 period, an increase of over 21 per cent as compared with the previous year, according to the Russian information. Exports during the year were valued at approximately $501,000,000, an increase of about 14 per cent over the 1928-29 year, indicating an unfavorable balance of $33,000,000.

The division of imports by main commodity groups shows considerable increase in the items of foodstuffs and raw and semi-manufactured materials, and a gain of some 85 per cent in manufactured goods. Exports remained almost unchanged in general character.

Firm to Enlarge Mexican Refinery

MEXICO CITY, March 21—Huasteca Petroleum Company, Standard Oil Company of Indiana subsidiary, will spend 4,000,000 pesos in enlarging its refinery at Tampico.

The company plans to produce high quality gasoline and cease importing it. The plant probably will be completed in eight months.

WELCOMES U. S. SUGAR PROBE

NEW YORK, March 21.—James H. Post, president of the Sugar Institute, Inc., which embraces all cane refiners in the United States, said that the institute would welcome the opportunity of having the courts determine the correctness of its course if any doubts have arisen in Washington.

He issued a statement in reference to reports that the Department of Justice had completed an investigation of the institute to determine whether the anti-trust laws are being violated, saying:

"All action of the institute has been under the direct advice of counsel, who sit with its committees, in order to maintain its administration within the scope of the Supreme Court decisions and of the original conference with Department of Justice officials at which the code of ethics under which the institute operates was worked out."

Pennsy Plans New Short Freight Route

The shortest freight route between Milwaukee and the east coast will be established by the Pennsylvania Railroad, via Pittsburgh, if tentative plans to operate a car ferry across Lake Michigan between Muskegon, Mich., and Milwaukee, with an extension to Manitowoc, Wis., are carried out, it is announced by Vice President John F. Deasy.

The Pennsylvania has a railroad from Grand Rapids to the Muskegon water front. The Grand Trunk railroad is soon to transfer the eastern terminus of all its lake ferry lines to Muskegon and operate under trackage rights over the Pennsylvania's rails from Muskegon to Grand Rapids.

Connellsville Firm Wins Tax Appeal

WASHINGTON, March 21.—(AP.)—A deficiency of $2,198 in income taxes decreed by the commissioner of internal revenue against Corrado & Galiardi, Inc., of Connellsville, was set aside by the Board of Tax Appeals.

The board in its finding upheld a claim of the corporation for a loss of income suffered through purchase of stock in the Southern Connellsville Coke Company, which later became worthless. The petitioning company paid for the stock by assumption of a note of the coke company and the board held the purchase was bona fide, overruling the revenue commissioner.

Officers Appointed To Reserve Corps

WASHINGTON, March 21.—(AP.)—Among Pennsylvanians commissioned by the War Department as members of the Officers' Reserve Corps were: Effingham B. Morris, Jr., Philadelphia, captain of cavalry; John E. Hickman, Reading, captain of coast artillery; John G. Hitz, 1528 Merrick avenue, Pittsburgh, first lieutenant of field artillery; Crawford C. Madeira, Philadelphia, first lieutenant of cavalry; Harry A. Morrison, West View, and William A. Reed, Edgewood, first lieutenants of field artillery.

February Spindle Placements Larger

WASHINGTON, March 21.—(INS.)—The Census Bureau announced today that on February 28 there were 33,225,144 cotton spinning spindles in place in the United States, of which 25,763,408 were operated at some time during the month, compared with 25,611,458 in January and 28,920,162 in February a year ago.

The aggregate number of active spindle hours reported for the month was 6,110,011,371.

Leather Tanners Advance Prices

NEW YORK, March 21.—Sole leather tanners have advanced prices 1 to 3 cents per pound.

TRADE TRENDS

AIRCRAFT—Expections of airplane manufacturers were partially realized today with approval by the United States War Department of contracts for new planes and engines involving $1,269,652. Orders for planes by the Army and Navy are expected by makers to approximate $24,000,000 within the next three or four months.

COAL—An increased tonnage of anthracite is moving to market as a result of the large companies shipping coal at the April circular, following a decision that spring price reductions this year will become effective April 1, instead of May 1, as last year. A substantial movement of coal is expected between now and the end of the month. No announcement as to what April prices will be has yet been made.

COPPER—Copper buying continues quiet. The amount available at 10 cents in the domestic market appears sufficient to cover present demand, but trade circles believe metal at that price would quickly disappear should any demand appear. Producers continue to quote 10¼ cents, delivered. The export price remains unchanged at 10.55 cents, c.i.f. European base ports.

INSOLVENCIES—Further improvement marked the record of commercial failures this week, R. G. Dun & Co. reports. Insolvencies totaled 549, a reduction of 16 from the previous week, and a decrease of nine from the 558 failures reported for the like week last year. Defaults with liabilities of $5,000 or more each totaled 342, a drop of 12 from last week, and also 12 below the number of similar failures last year.

Stock Exchange Topics

Wall Street Interested In Price Advance of Steel Products.

Changes for the better have come in the steel trade. In addition to the prospects for substantial structural contracts still to be awarded, Wall street is interested vitally in the advance in the price of bars, shapes and plates announced by the U. S. Steel Corporation and followed by competitors. Much will depend upon the reception of these new prices by consumers. It is known that some users resent a price advance at any time, but if some of those who have been delaying placing contracts can be brought into the market before the end of this month prior to the effectiveness of the price advance, it would result in some good business and increased operations.

Standard Statistics, after a careful survey of the outlook and possibilities of the natural gas industry, issues a word of caution to would-be investors in this group. It makes mention of the fact that over-enthusiasm as to the commercial possibilities of this newly-born industry, especially in connection with the financing of new projects, has led to excess, the character of which is already recognized among experienced leaders of the business. While the prospective development of the business promises substantial profits, recent untoward events point forcibly to the necessity for exercising unusually searching discrimination in the selection of the media through which these are to be secured. For such reasons, possible selection is narrowed to a few companies, among which are Columbia Gas and Electric, Electric Power and Light, Lone Star Gas, Pacific Gas and Electric and United Gas Corporation.

News of the application of the Consolidated Gas Company to the Public Service Commission, seeking authority for itself and numerous of its subsidiaries to issue a very substantial amount of new securities, seemed to put the damper on bullish activity in that stock for the moment. The company itself seeks permission to issue $60,000,000 4½ per cent 20-year bonds and 574,374 shares of $5 cumulative preferred stock, and to acquire securities of other companies. Presumably the last-mentioned acquisitions are meant to cover new stock of the Brooklyn Edison Company, Bronx Gas and Electric, New York and Queens Electric, United Electric Light, New York Edison and its other subsidiaries.

Though the stock market has enjoyed a fairly substantial measure of price appreciation since the end of last year, the advance has not been accompanied by any such expansion in broker borrowings as took place in the course of the early 1930 advance. Between the end of December, 1929, and the week ended March 19, last year, the total of broker borrowings rose some $417,000,000, keeping abreast of the steady advance in stock values. To date this year, however, the rise in stocks has not found any reflection at all in the loan total. As a matter of fact at the current figure of $1,193,000,000 such borrowings are actually $13,000,000 smaller than on December 31, last.

Those who follow the market situation closely reported evidence of increasingly good character of selling coming into stocks around the current high levels. This was declared to have been especially true in the case of Steel common, where it is contended scale selling of the best kind has been indicated since early Thursday. The industrial bellwether appeared to encounter quite persistent selling pressure throughout yesterday morning just around the 150 level, and in the afternoon period the stock yielded to levels nearly two points under the high reached shortly after the opening. Selling also seemed to be quite aggressive in many of the utilities also as those shares approached the top prices of the movement.

If some of the current gossip going the rounds is well founded, it appears that some of the greatly advertised bull leaders of other years who have been hiding out either voluntarily or for other reasons, are getting back into the market again. This group which ultimately came to be known as the "Big Ten," had the full run of things until just before the market's collapse in 1929, but in the interval since that time little had been heard of the individuals making up the group. For weeks, however, the name of one of the old bull crowd has been identified with activities for the rise in a number of stocks including Industrial Rayon, and lately Columbia Gas and Electric. Now it is said that another of the group is to head a pool forming in Westinghouse, the aim of which is to put the "screws" down on the short interest in that stock.

LEHMAN SAILS --OPTIMISTIC

NEW YORK, March 21.—Albert C. Lehman, president of the Blaw-Knox Company, sailed yesterday for Europe aboard the French liner France on a 10 weeks' business and pleasure trip abroad. He stated that while abroad he would attend conferences with heads of various subsidiaries of Blaw-Knox in England, France, Germany and Italy, with the expectation of increasing the company's plant capacity in France and Germany. Mr. Lehman said:

"Our business so far this year is holding up well and although it is hardly possible that our first quarter showing will equal the corresponding period of 1930, it will not show a material reduction. Blaw-Knox business prospects for the rest of 1931 look good. Our banking and financial conditions are strong."

MOTORS PLACES BIG ORDERS

NEW YORK, March 21.—The General Motors Corporation has placed orders for its requirements of copper, cotton, rubber, tin and zinc for the remainder of the 1931 production season. It was said the orders total many millions of dollars. The company frequently anticipates its requirements of materials, depending on the status of the market in each commodity, but its action in ordering all of its needs in five basic commodities more than eight months in advance was said to be without precedent.

MESTA MACHINE AT NEW TOP FOR YEAR

Continued Demand Raises Price on Local Market; Fuel Stocks Unchanged

Continued demand for Mesta Machine on the Pittsburgh Stock Exchange advanced that issue to a new 1931 high today, carrying the price 10 points above the year's low. Buying is directly attributable to the company's 1930 earnings statement, showing a gain of about 80 per cent in net earnings, as compared with the previous year. Current levels, around 35, compare with last year's low of 19, recorded in September.

The remainder of the market was steady to firm with volume of business showing a slight increase over the average earlier in the week. Fuels remained narrow, as they have been all week. Armstrong Cork, which has been subjected to selling recently as a result of an unfavorable report for 1930, firmed up a little. Pittsburgh Investment Securities, a local investment trust, sold off to 1½, comparing with its last previous sale at 3¼, recorded early this month.

PERSHING FOILS NEW PLAN TO SPLIT ARMY

Foch Attempts to Get Our Men Under French Control: Baker, Lloyd George Clash

CHAPTER LXIX.

With the first phase of the Meuse-Argonne offensive completed I was surprised to receive a proposal by Marshal Foch, brought to my headquarters October 1 by Gen. Weygand, to insert the French 2nd Army between the American 1st and the French 4th armies.

It was suggested that the Second Army should take over those divisions from the left of our First Army that were in and near the Argonne Forest, leaving the rest of the army under my command.

Foch's idea seemed to be that this would accelerate the advance.

Gen. Pershing

The proposal was similar to the one presented by Foch on August 30, which was rejected so positively that I thought the matter settled once for all.

Just what prompted the idea I was never able to learn, but I surmised that Clemenceau had suggested or directed some such action. Clemenceau could not have had much knowledge of military situations or of operations, and he probably measured success by the number of kilometers gained in a given time, regardless of the terrain or the stubbornness with which it was defended.

He assumed, however, to judge in such matters as though he were quite competent to do so. He apparently had a notion that his position as French Prime Minister and head of the Supreme War Council gave him authority over Foch. But the Allied Commander was chosen by the governments concerned and was responsible to them jointly.

He realized, no doubt, that his position was entirely dependent upon the unanimous support of the governments which had chosen him. That is to say, if any one of them, including his own, had objected to him as Allied Commander-in-Chief his tenure would have been at an end.

The proposition Weygand submitted was not sound because the different features of that front were interdependent and the advantages they afforded the defense could best be overcome by a force under one control.

Explains Objections

Another objection was that there was only one road leading to the part of our front which was proposed for the French 2nd Army and an attempt to use it for the supply of two different armies would have resulted in many complications. Moreover, the Marshal, as usual, overlooked the fact that our men seriously objected to service in the French Army and would not serve in it with the same enthusiasm as in their own.

I pointed out these objections to Weygand and told him that the change would, in my opinion, retard instead of increase Allied speed. He left with the view that I was right, and my formal reply disapproving the plan, sent by letter, seemed to settle the matter.

My diary at this point records:

Gen. Claudel

"Souilly, Thursday, October 3, 1918. Claudel came yesterday to receive instructions about proposed attack. (General Claudel commanded the French Seventeenth Corps at Verdun, which formed a part of the American First Army.) Sent letter to Secretary Baker.

"Minor engagements have occurred since September 29. Captured positions being consolidated.

"This afternoon saw corps commanders about the attack tomorrow. Roads rapidly improving and conditions better.

"Serious situation as to motor transport again cabled to Washington. Shortage in tonnage reducing supplies to danger point. The French have agreed to import locomotives and turn over cars made for them in the United States. Atterbury has cabled Felton complete rail requirements."

Short of Motor Vehicles

We were woefully deficient in motor transportation now that we had undertaken large operations, although the shipment of motor vehicles had been repeatedly urged upon the War Department. Once more we were almost wholly dependent upon the French for land transport to move our troops and to handle about half of our ammunition supply.

To carry on operations, we had almost to strip the S. O. S. of trucks, and this seriously interfered with work at the base ports, with construction projects at other points, and with supply of troops in general.

The shortage of ambulances to move the sick and wounded was critical, and we were compelled to borrow 15 American ambulance sections from Italy. But we had reached the point where we were no longer able to borrow.

This condition was not easy to reconcile with the suggestion from Washington a short time before that motor transportation be largely substituted for horses.

All these facts were pointed out plainly to the War Department, but we received little or no encouragement. According to the department's detailed program of shipments, the best we could expect in the near future was only about one-fifth of our requirements. The promise to ship us 10,000 motor vehicles in October was only partially fulfilled.

In locomotives and cars the situation continued much the same, and came to such a pass that the French said they could do no more. They offered to import for us as many locomotives as could be produced in excess of our monthly program, the non-fulfillment of which had left us short, and to turn over sufficient cars manufactured on their order to bring monthly shipments up to 7,500.

Tonnage Far Behind

Considering questions of supply, we were always forced back to the subject of shipping. Our tonnage allotments were not keeping up to our increasing demands. In July, for instance, we were allotted 475,000 tons against my request for 750,000, and we received 438,000 tons.

It was the same in August when we were allotted 700,000 tons and received 511,000, and on the basis of receipts for the first two weeks of September it was probable we would run some 200,000 tons short that month. The situation was so grave that in my cable setting forth the deficiencies I said: "Unless supplies are furnished when and as called for, our armies will cease to operate."

To aggravate matters, shipments seemed haphazard. For instance, in August 50,000 excess tons of quarter-master supplies were sent, of which we had a surplus, and in that month the shipments showed a deficiency of 50,000 tons pertaining to the transportation department and motor transport.

In cabling this to Washington I stated: "You must prepare to ship supplies we request instead of shipping excessive amounts of supplies of which we have a due proportion."

It was next to impossible to consider with complacency a situation which left us not only short of supplies, but almost without modern means to move our armies. When a nation is forced into war without preparation, neither men nor equipment are at once forthcoming and time is required to develop the flow of all that is needed, which is difficult because of the pressure for haste from all quarters.

Troop Shipments Lag

Yet after nearly 18 months of war it would be reasonable to expect that the organization at home would have been more nearly able to provide adequate equipment and supplies, and to handle shipments more systematically. It was fortunate, indeed, that we were not operating alone, for the failure to meet our demands would long since have caused us serious trouble if not irreparable disaster.

There was hope, however, of some improvement in the tonnage situation. When Secretary Baker came back from England to be with us at the beginning of the Meuse-Argonne battle, he brought the welcome news that he had succeeded in getting an allotment of 200,000 tons of shipping from the British, on the condition that we should help them out later in the shipment of cereals, if it should become necessary.

He cabled President Wilson asking approval of an agreement he wished to make with Lord Reading that there would be no diversion of tonnage from the amount needed for the maintenance of our forces in Europe if we would agree to co-operate with the Allies by using our tonnage for their supply programs as their needs should become paramount. With the prospect of having this additional amount of tonnage available at once, the situation began to look more hopeful.

The arrivals of personnel were not keeping up with the 80-division program, even as construed in Washington. Our contention was that these 80 divisions should be combat troops, and that in addition we should have a corresponding number for the various units connected with the S. O. S., but Washington took another view.

British Wanted Yankees

At any rate, for the forces then in France there was needed to balance the command, 129,000 army troops, 93,000 corps troops, 83,000 S. O. S. troops and 65,000 replacements.

In order to make definite plans for the future, it was necessary for us to have the troops for the various purposes in due proportion. However, it was evident from the correspondence that, in the opinion of the War Department, 3,000,000 men would be the highest number that could be trained, transported and supplied.

Under date of October 2, Secretary Baker, who was now about to leave for home, wrote me at length on shipping and other matters of great interest. Referring to events at a dinner in London, his letter is quoted here in part:

"Mr. Lloyd George said he had something which he felt it very important to say to me, and to say with great frankness. We all kept quiet, and he talked, I should say, for half an hour without interruption. I cannot reproduce verbally what he said, but, in effect, it was this:

"That the British had brought over from the United States an enormous number of troops in the firm expectation that they would be trained with the British and would assist the British in their Flanders fighting.

Gen. Haig

"That they had gone to great lengths to supply and equip our troops, and finally had some 10 divisions of them about ready to engage in conflict, and included in Sir Douglas Haig's plans of attack, when suddenly the five best trained divisions were taken away just at the time they would have been of most service with Haig's troops.

"That later, of the five divisions then with the British, three were taken away, and that he was informed that the other two came near being taken away so that the effect of the whole business was that for all their pains and sacrifices for training our troops there and equipping them they had gotten no good out of them whatever, and that the American troops had not been on any service to the British.

"That at one time, when some American troops were about to go into action with the British, peremptory orders had been issued that they should not go into action as they were not adequately trained."

Baker Surprised

From this he went on to say that he was earnestly desirous for opportunity of the America and British soldiers to fraternize.

He felt that large issues to the future peace of the world depended upon the American and British peoples understanding one another, and that much the best hope of such an understanding grew out of intermingling our soldiers so they could learn to know one another, but that it seemed to him that there was some influence at work to monopolize American soldiers for the assistance of the French and to keep them from the association of the British.

Lord Reading

"I replied that I was profoundly surprised at the feeling he expressed, since Lord Reading and I had quite definitely understood in Washington, and our understanding had been set up in a memorandum of which copy had been sent him, that the American troops brought over by the British were expedited because of the lack of reserves by the British and French, which would be made up by August 1.

"That I had stated to Lord Reading and put into the memorandum that these American troops assigned for training with the British were to be subject to your call at any time at your discretion and that their training and use was constantly to be such as you directed. I had, therefore, no thought that there could be any ground for misunderstanding your right to take the American troops at any time you wanted them.

"I pointed out that the President and I had repeatedly both verbally and in writing insisted that the American Army as such was the thing we were trying to create. That we had no intention of feeding our soldiers into the French or British Army, and intended to have an American Army in exactly the same sense that Great Britain had a British Army and France a French Army.

Pershing Impressed

"That we all recognized the right to Marshal Foch to send divisions of American or French or British from one part of the line to another for particular operations or to create a composite reserve which would have troops of all three nations for use as reserves, but with that exception American troops in France were as completely under your control as British troops in France were under the control of Sir Douglas Haig.

"The conversation left on my mind a very strong feeling that Lloyd George frankly wants Americans to remain with the British both as a stimulus and for the fraternization which he describes, and that he is very suspicious that the French are desiring to monopolize the Americans and so come out of the war as our principal friends without there having been real opportunity for co-operation and understanding between the British and Americans.

"I, of course, gave him no assurances whatever, and when he asked me what expectations I thought he ought to have about the use of American troops I replied shortly that I thought he ought to expect the American Army as such to exist in the same sense as the British Army, and to be used there as a whole or by the detachment of divisions here and there wherever the largest good could be accomplished for the cause in the judgment of the Commander-in-Chief."

The Secretary's letter impressed me, as did almost every communication received from him, with his earnest purpose to do everything possible for our success. His desire to aid in the solution of the multitude of problems which confronted me, his clear comprehension of their magnitude, his sympathy, his infinite tact and understanding, were qualities that served to lighten my burden and inspire loyalty to his direction of America's military effort.

No American general in the field every received the perfect support accorded me by Mr. Baker. His attitude throughout the war, in so far as it concerned me personally and the Army in France, was a model for the guidance of future secretaries in such an emergency.

YANKEE HORSES SPUR RACE INTEREST

THE PRESENCE IN the prospective starting field of a double Pittsburgh entry in R. K. Mellon's Alike and Glangesia, together with the fact that one of the nine other American-owned horses entered, John Hay Whitney's Easter Hero, may be the favorite, causes local sport followers to look forward with even greater interest than usual to the annual running next week of what has long been recognized as the toughest and most dangerous horse race in the world.

R. K. Mellon

It is the Grand National Steeplechase, scheduled to be run next Friday over the famous Aintree course, near Liverpool, England, and easily the oldest of all cross-country events. It had its first running 94 years ago, or in 1837, at Maghull, though its history generally is dated from 1839, when it was transferred to the present Aintree course. Even when the weather is unfavorable, and despite the difficulty of seeing the horses, due to dips in the field, the race attracts huge gatherings yearly, and has been witnessed by as many as 300,000.

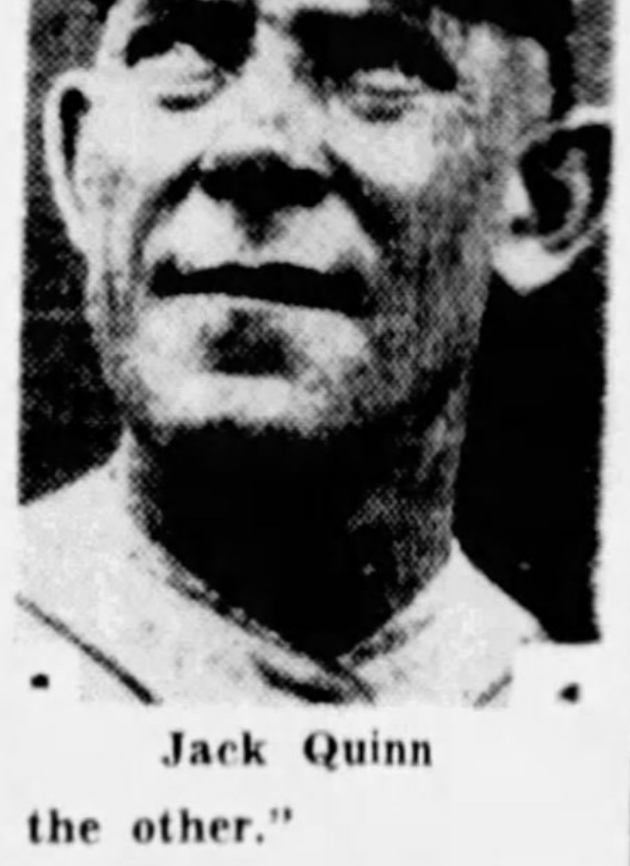
THE HORSES GO twice around the course, and the total distance is four miles, 856 yards. There are 16 fences, but on the second time around two of them are not jumped. These are the Chair and the Water Jump. The Chair is a fence five feet high and three feet wide, with a ditch 6x2½ feet on the take-off side. The Water Jump covers a 15-foot span with a hedge two and one-half feet high on the far side. The fences are permanent affairs of growing Scotch thorn, through which it is impossible to break. A horse must clear each jump, refuse, or be hung up.

One stretch of seven furlongs is through plowed, clay-bogged fields. The numerous hazardous obstacles include Becher's Brook, the canal turn, Valentine's Brook, the open ditch, the 15-footer and an uphill run home. At Becher's and Valentine's brooks there are fences five feet high and three and one-half feet wide, with a natural brook five and one-half feet wide on the far side. Moreover, there is a drop of several feet on the same side. Many serious accidents have occurred at these dangerous spots.

SO DIFFICULT AND hazardous is the course that the odds are 5 to 1 against a horse completing the race. In 1911 only one horse finished out of 26 starters, and in 1913 two finished out of 35. Again in 1921 just one finished out of 35. In each of these races fallen horses were remounted to take portions of the purse.

The longest priced winners were Tipperary Time in 1928 and Gregalach in 1929, both 100-to-1 shots. The shortest-priced winner was Poethlyn in 1919, 11 to 4. The record for the course is 9 minutes and 30 seconds, made in 1862 by Huntsman. Shaun Goilin won last year in 9:40 3-5. The winner gets $50,000 or more and a $1,000 trophy. Top weight is 175 pounds.

AMERICAN-OWNED HORSES have won only twice—Stephen Sanford's Sergeant Murphy in 1923 and A. C. Schwartz's Jack Horner in 1927. Rubio, winner in 1908 at 66 to 1, was American bred but was owned by an Englishman. Of other American contenders, Howard Bruce's Billy Barton was second in 1928 and Whitney's Easter Hero was second in 1929, each being beaten by a 100-to-1 shot. Billy Barton fell at the last jump when leading in 1928. Easter Hero looked liked a sure winner in 1929, but spread a plate and was beaten out by Gregalach. Whether Easter Hero can win the third American victory next week is a question. He is pronounced fit, but this is a race in which even the greatest horse has got to have Lady Luck on his side as well.



Jack Quinn

OLD JACK QUINN, shifted from the A's to the Robins, and who has been around long enough to know what it's all about, takes exception to the claim that the American League is stronger than the National.

"Frankly, I can see no reason for thinking that one league is stronger than the other," he remarked. "Jimmy Foxx's homer in the fifth game decided the last world series, and when two clubs are so evenly matched that it takes a hit in the pinch to decide a series there is no reason for thinking that one team or one league outclasses the other."

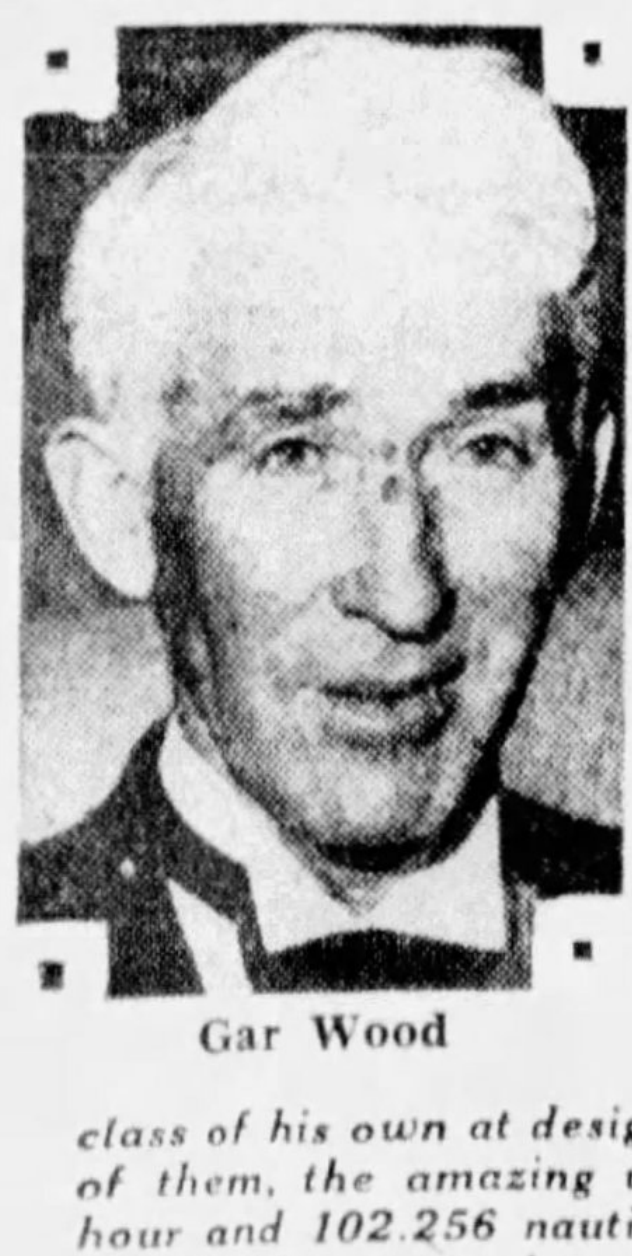
ONE OF THE biggest upsets in turf history will be chronicled tomorrow if Sun Beau fails to win the rich $100,000 Agua Caliente Handicap at a mile and a quarter on the Mexican track.

Willis Sharpe Kilmer's 6-year-old stands out so impressively in a field that otherwise lacks quality that he has been made a top-heavy favorite and the dopesters figure he just can't lose.

LOUIS VUKOVCAN writes from Ambridge: "Many persons are of the same opinion as the writer, that it is not fair when the W. P. I. A. L. basketball champions have to meet the representative team of Pittsburgh, the winner to participate in the state tournament. I think it gives the city schools an advantage over the others. Why don't they enter Pittsburgh's representative team in the W. P. I. A. L. elimination tournament, like the other sectional champions? If the city title winner were a member of the W. P. I. A. L., entered in the sectional tournament and met defeat, I am sure no one would deny its right to be ranked as the city champion. I think that a team winning the W. P. I. A. L. championship, whether or not it is good enough to defeat the city school, should not be deprived of a chance to enter the state tournament."

THOUGH LOCAL HOCKEY fans had confidently anticipated that the Pittsburgh club would retain its hold on fourth place, the success of the Yellow Jackets in clinching an International League playoff berth by beating Buffalo here last night, 2 to 1, in the final game of the regular season was none the less gratifying.

Seeing the home club in the playoffs for the title is refreshingly different from the tailend gloom of Pirate seasons in the National loop. The Jackets will be facing the class of the league in the playoffs, and the season's records would appear to argue against their chances of winning out, but those records are not to be taken at face value, as the local club is far stronger now than when the campaign began.



Gar Wood

AFTER ALL, IT looks as if Len Harvey will have to be classed with the numerous other fistic failures England has sent over. The loss of the decision to Ben Jeby in their 12-round bout in New York last night probably puts an end to the Briton's middleweight title aspirations.

Harvey had appeared still to have a chance to get somewhere after losing two bouts to Vince Dundee on questionable decisions, but his failure to beat the comparatively inexperienced Jeby, who was fighting only his thirty-third contest, practically eliminates him.

UNLESS IT IS surpassed by Gar Wood himself, who appears to be in a class of his own at designing speed boats and then getting most out of them, the amazing world record of 101.154 statute miles per hour and 102.256 nautical miles per hour, which he set at Miami Beach, Fla., yesterday with his newest motorboat, Miss America IX, probably will stand for a long time. The record of 102.256 nautical miles is equal to about 117 statute miles per hour, a motor boat speed that was undreamed of a few years ago, and there is no other boat builder or driver in sight who threatens to rival the achievement.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 21.—The Native Sons are all set today for the second clash of the Pirates and Cubs. About 4,000 San Franciscans sat in at the new Seals Stadium yesterday and the big league dish had the right sort of flavor to whet local appetites.

The Freebooters made just enough blunders to lose the opener, 6 to 3, but they are eager for more action. It is likely Heinie Meine will be on the mound at the start of the contest, with Charley Wood available for the relief trick. If Manager Hornsby runs to form, he will start one of his first-stringers, perhaps Pat Malone or Guy Bush.

The jumpoff game started out auspiciously for the Buccos, but they fell by the wayside. Ervin Brame was down on the books to officiate on the slab, but the big righthander turned an ankle, and he is out of whack as a result. There is a chance he will be able to work today, but Skipper Ens will be satisfied if he is fit to pitch one of the games tomorrow.

BEDNAR PULLS BONERS

There were times yesterday when Andy Bednar appeared to be one of the best young pitchers in the National League, but in two clinches he showed his inexperience and the Cubs were able to forge to the front.

Leo Hartnett won the battle in the fifth when, with the score tied, two out and Manager Hornsby on third, he walloped a long drive over the left center fence for the first home run in the new park. It was a Herculanean clout, and the multitude gave the sturdy catcher a big ovation.

Bednar whiffed the big catcher in the second inning with a fast ball high on the inside. In the fifth round he had two strikes on Gabby. Manager Ens signaled Bednar for another fast ball, but either Bednar or Eddie Phillips mixed up the thing and a curve was served the slugger. To mince matters, Andy placed the hook on the inside corner, where it could feel the wrath of Leo's power.

The Pittsburgh pilot was a sore general as he saw the rocket dip over the fence. There is nothing at stake in these games, but Ens does not tolerate such mistakes of judgment. He warned Andy that another such stunt, and it would bring a fine. Ens contends that big leaguers should not slip up in this manner.

ANDY BEWILDERING

Andy's stuff was so bewildering he had fellows like Hack Wilson on the wagon. At the conclusion of the game, Hack the Whacker took occasion to pay a tribute to the curve ball Bednar used while the home run king was at the plate. Andy fanned Wilson on two occasions.

The Pirates went into the first game under a handicap, while the Cubs are just about set with their regular offensive. Paul Waner is not ready to play and Adam Comorosky is not in shape to go for nine rounds.

Charley Root, clever veteran, pitched the entire game for Hornsby, thereby setting a new style in early springtime pitching. The Pirates made merry with Root in the first two rounds, scoring twice. The Cubs put over a tally in the second, and in the fourth Kiki Cuyler socked two counters across after Bednar had walked Root. That was another slip on the part of Bednar. Hartnett's homer added two in the fifth and Capt. Grimm's single of the sixth led to a safety tally.

DETROIT GETS A. B. C.

BUFFALO, March 21 (AP.)—Detroit landed the thirty-first annual American Bowling Congress tourney by a margin of six votes. The final tabulation showed Detroit 166, St. Louis 160 and Buffalo 1. H. William Pollack, Buffalo, was re-elected president; W. A. Legear, St. Louis, was retained as first vice president; Elmer Baumgarten, Chicago, was elevated from third to second vice president, and Charley Koch, Cleveland, was selected as third vice president.

GAME TONIGHT
Buffalo at Cleveland.

By CARL W. SHATTO

The 1930-31 International League hockey season, insofar as Pittsburgh is concerned, today is a closed book and the curtain has been lowered on one of the most sensational campaigns in local ice history. On Tuesday, however, the book will be reopened that a thrilling postscript may be indited, and the curtain is down only that the Duquesne Garden may be prepared for the enacting of the circuit's annual post-season championship series, into which the Yellow Jackets edged their way by defeating the Buffalo Bisons, 2 to 1, at the Garden last night.

The title tests will open Tuesday night, when the local puckmen will meet the Indians, defending champions, in Cleveland, and Buffalo will appear at Windsor. The series inaugural at Duquesne Garden is carded for Thursday, when Buffalo will be "entertained," and next Saturday the Schooley icemen will invade Buffalo.

SCHEDULE CHANGED

The schedule for the last three series games involving Pittsburgh is as follows: Tuesday, March 31, Cleveland at Pittsburgh; Thursday, April 2, Pittsburgh at Windsor; Saturday, April 4, Windsor at Pittsburgh.

A tentative title series program announced a few days ago had the Indians appearing here for the first playoff game on Tuesday. The changes in the card were announced today by Charles S. King, league president.

The regular season here died much as it had lived. It was a nerve-wracking race in which the Schooley skaters at no time were certain of finishing in the money, and the final game was a nerve-wracking affair in which a Pittsburgh victory was assured only when the final gong sounded, with the Jackets leading by the scant, but very sufficient margin of 2 to 1.

GAIN FIVE-POINT LEAD

It was very fitting that the locals' victims in their successful "last stand" should be the first-place Bisons, and the triumph was the first that the Jackets have been able to achieve over the pace-setters during the long and hectic race. The Bisons previously had gained five wins and two ties in seven clashes with the Schooley stalwarts.

Pittsburgh entered last night's fight sporting a three-point lead over London, and because two points are awarded for a triumph, the yellow-shirts came out of the joust with a five-point lead over their idle rivals. London still has two games to play, but should the Tecumsehs win both of their remaining engagements they will finish one point behind Pittsburgh and the last playoff berth.

Tex White, veteran right wing who caged the only goal in the Jackets' "make or break" duel in London last Tuesday, shared the hero role with Capt. Tory Gregg, another right wing, in the final all-important debate. Gregg scored at the start of the second period to give Pittsburgh a 1-0 lead, and in the third stanza, when the count was knotted at 1-1, White dented the strands of the Buffalo net for the goal that carried the locals right into the title series.

The game opened with a whirlwind of action, and the first

NAVY RINGMEN SET PACE

STATE COLLEGE, Pa., March 21.—(AP.)—The socking sons of Navy and Western Maryland, from down along the southern fringe of the Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association, battered their separate ways last night to the threshold of the 1931 championship.

Five Midshipmen from Annapolis punched their way into the final round and four clouters from Western Maryland kept pace behind them. Between the two, they grabbed nine of the 16 places in the final duels to be staged here in seven classes tonight.

Because of its weight of numbers, Navy, led by Lanky Norman Hall, defending title holder in the 160-pound class, and John Davis, conqueror of this season's middleweight scourge from Syracuse, Joseph Moran, was the favorite to take over the team title won last year by Penn State.

The home guards were able to place only two men in the finals, clever Dave Stoop, in the 125-pound class, and Al Lewis, a stocky 145-pounder. Syracuse placed two youngsters in the finals and M. I. T. one.

Western Maryland turned in the only two knockouts scored in the 14-bout evening. The summary:

115-pound class—Paul Viccari, Syracuse, defeated Julius Epstein, Penn State, decision; Paul Orelman, M. I. T., defeated Joseph Kazmersky, Pennsylvania, decision.

125-pound class—David Stoop, Penn State, defeated Marvin Shadel, Pennsylvania, decision; Albert Wertheimer, Syracuse, defeated John Fitzgerald, Navy, decision (extra round).

135-pound class—Douglas Crosby, Western Maryland, defeated John McAndrews, Penn State, decision; Herb Fulmer, Navy, defeated Harry Wolanin, Syracuse, decision.

145-pound class—Alfred Lewis, Penn State, defeated Herb Ross, Syracuse, decision; Norman Hall, Navy, defeated Alfred Borchers, Western Maryland, decision.

160-pound class—John Davis, Navy, defeated Joseph Moran, Syracuse, decision; Steese Brubaker, Western Maryland, knocked out Peyton Cooper, M. I. T., third round.

175-pound class—George Ekaitis, Western Maryland, knocked out John Gervan, Penn State, 15 seconds of first round; Jack Andrews, Navy, defeated Benjamin Broselow, Pennsylvania, decision (extra round).

Heavyweight class—Ludwig Pincura, Western Maryland, defeated Henry Frank, Syracuse, decision; Frank Crinkley, Navy, defeated Joseph Miller, Penn State, decision.

Jeby Gets Easy Victory Over Harvey

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP.)—A change in managers has failed to save Len Harvey, British middleweight champion, from his third successive American defeat.

Beaten twice by Vince Dundee in the last couple of months, the pale Briton took a solid trouncing from a young New York preliminary fighter, Ben Jeby, in 12 rounds at Madison Square Garden last night.

Jimmy Johnston, who recently took over Harvey's contract, was a somewhat embarrassed spectator in the crowd of 8,000 persons.

Jeby fought a rushing, body-punching battle at close range and Harvey solved it only in flashes.

ANDRUCCI BOWS TO DEVINE

ERIE, Pa., March 21.—Harry Devine, Worcester, Mass., lightweight, punched his way to a decisive victory over Andy Andrucci, Pittsburgh, in the 10-round main bout here last night. Andrucci claimed a foul in the third round, but when informed that his purse would be held up, consented to continue. He was outclassed from the start. Devine weighed 137, Andrucci 139¼.

Lou Petrone, Boston, scored a technical knockout over Benny McArthur, of McKeesport, in the sixth round. McArthur suffered a cut over his left eye in the fifth, and his seconds tossed in the towel between rounds. Referee Jerry Cole recommended McArthur's purse be held up, contending the McKeesport boy did not put up as good a scrap as he was capable of. Petrone weighed 137, McArthur 135½.

Jimmy Riley, Pittsburgh, and Bobby Vogel, Erie, fought to a judges' draw in a four-round preliminary. Riley weighed 133½, Vogel 136.

POLOISTS STAGE TWIN BILL

The Pittsburgh Polo Association offers a doubleheader attraction in the Hunt Armory, East End, tonight. In addition to the regular league game, between the Vangs and the 107th Field Artillery riders, the Princeton University freshman team engages the 308th Cavalry.

Princeton is engaging in a strenuous two-day program. This morning the Tigers meet Culver Military Academy's trio in Culver, Ind. Tonight they play here, tomorrow afternoon in Youngstown against the Mill Creek team and tomorrow night against a team in Cleveland.

Bliss Flaccus, former Shady Side Academy star, is captain of the Princeton team.

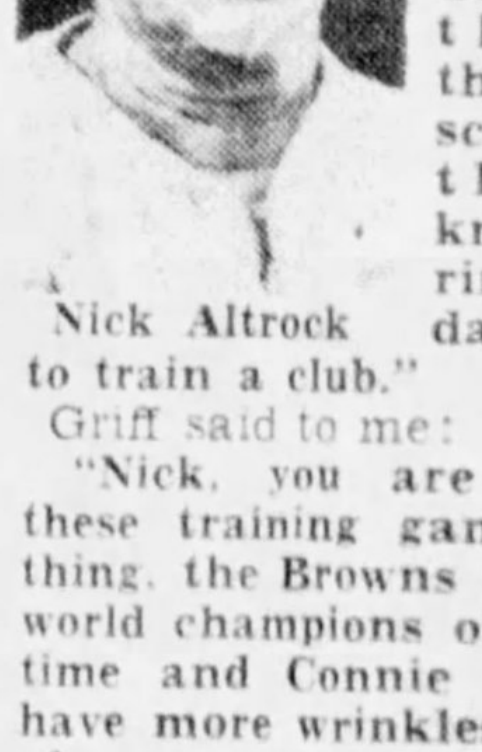
Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

BILOXI, Miss., March 21.—Our Washington Club will only meet minor league teams this spring, except the second week of April we play the Braves and the Philly Nationals, and even then we won't know the difference.



Nick Altrock

I said to Griff: "This is like taking the boys through kindergarten and then shoving them into high school before they even know the bell rings. It's a dangerous way to train a club."

Griff said to me:

"Nick, you are wrong. If these training games meant a thing, the Browns would be the world champions of the springtime and Connie Mack would have more wrinkles than a roll of crepe paper."

I guess he is right.

SCOTT, WESTINGHOUSE PRIMED FOR BATTLE

Hundred, Defending Champ, Reaches Semi-Finals of West Virginia Tourney

P. I. A. A. SERIES UNDER WAY TONIGHT

The Lineup

Scott		Westinghouse
Tomko	F	Mero
Ferguson	F	Liminoff
Bache	C	Ware
Kuno	G	Dye
Krutulis	G	Wendell

By JESS CARVER

Dashing into the annual P. I. A. A. inter-[illegible] basketball competition, with the state championship dangling as a prize [illegible] before the [illegible] under way in the Stadium tonight as Scott [illegible] P. I. A. L. champion representing District VII, takes on Westinghouse, [illegible] the burden for District VIII.

The winner of tonight's game will advance into the next round and Tuesday will battle the winner of the District IX-X battle between DuBois and Farrell, also scheduled for tonight at Greenville.

In another classic tonight Windber, of District V, meets Hollidaysburg, of Section VI, at Johnstown.

SCOTT FAVORED

North Braddock is favored over Westinghouse in tonight's engagement, which seems natural enough. Westinghouse could not even win the title in its section of the City League, much less the league crown, and has been certified to represent District VIII in the state-wide play only because the City League champion and the runner-up, Schenley and South Hills, are not members of the P. I. A. A.

At that, Westinghouse was good enough to knock off both the 1930 defending W. P. I. A. L. and state champions, New Kensington and Sharon, during the regular season and has been resting for two weeks, improving the time by observing the play of Scott in the W. P. I. A. L. tourney.

PLAYERS TIRED

Scott hit the peak Wednesday evening in the W. P. I. A. L. final in trimming Duquesne and there may be a letdown tonight. The Tomko-Ferguson - Bache-Krutulis-Kuno combination is a honey, possibly one of the best in the state, but the boys are tired, for they've played about 25 games, and it is difficult to bring a team of any sort "up" for a game twice within a week.

Favorite or not, Scott looks to be in for a tough evening.

Both teams will employ their regular lineups, Westinghouse, with the two weeks of added drill, boasts a right formidable combine in Mero and Liminoff, forwards, Joe (Showboat) Ware, center, and Bobby Dye and Wendell at the guards.

ROVERS BATTLE CRAFTON TODAY

By TOM BIRKS

The Pittsburgh Rovers and the Crafton Heights soccer aggregation clash this afternoon at the Westinghouse High School field in the first round of the Nied Cup play.

The winner goes into the semifinals. The game will be called at 3:15, and a large crowd is expected to attend.

Tomorrow afternoon at Husher Field, Monessen, Dunlevy meets Bridgeville in the second game for the West Penn Cup. Dunlevy won the first game last Sunday, and if it cops tomorrow the upriver club will be champion.

Gallatin, champion of the Mon-Yough League, travels to Paterson, N. J., tomorrow, to meet a team of that town. Later in the season Paterson will play at Gallatin to return the visit.

VOLLEYBALL PLAY OPENS

The annual invitation volleyball tournament of the Downtown Y. M. C. A. is on the program for the evening. Teams from Wilmerding, Wheeling, Oil City and the Westinghouse Club will compete beginning at 6 p. m.

TECH MEETS BUCKNELL

Carnegie Tech's boxing team was en route this morning to Lewisburg, Pa., where it will engage Bucknell's ringmen in the Tartans' first match of the season tonight.

JACKETS GAIN PLAYOFFS

period, although scoreless, was easily the fastest and most hard-fought of the night. McGuire, Gregg and Proudlock for Pittsburgh, and Martin and Roth, for Buffalo, had excellent scoring chances, but Goalies Cox and Taugher proved equal to each occasion.

At the start of the second stanza Eddie Rodden broke through to the Bison goal after seizing the puck on the opening faceoff, but his hard drive just missed a corner of the net. A few seconds later Gregg duplicated Rodden's feat. He rushed in on top of Goalie Taugher on a lone dash and banged home the initial goal after only 31 seconds of play in the second period had elapsed.

The play was somewhat indifferent until late in the stanza when Gordy Fraser, defense ace, playing with his broken hand in a special brace, stopped a hard-shot puck with his crippled mitt. Fraser was compelled to quit the fray, and his departure was the signal for the local defense to fold up like an accordion. Murray, Roth, Gross and Voss, of the Bisons, broke through repeatedly, and at 18:55 Voss took a pass from Gross right at the goal mouth to beat Cox and knot the count.

WHITE SCORES VICTORY

Fast skating and brilliant stick handling enabled White to break through for the victory goal when the final stanza was five minutes 20 seconds old. Tex, unaccompanied, dribbled his way through the Bison defense, and showed his customary coolness when he at last had only Goalie Taugher to beat.

Fraser returned to action in the third period, and remained in the lineup until the finish of the fight. The new injury to his hand was found not to be of a serious nature, and he will be in the thick of the playoff milling.

The final fray was witnessed by an enthusiastic crowd of capacity proportions. Every inch of available space was claimed by an eager fan long before the opening face-off, and thousands of ticket applications had to be refused because the supply was exhausted.

At the finish of the fray the fans again stormed the Garden box office—this time to obtain tickets to the title series opener.

They were informed that the series ticket sale would not begin until Monday, that those taking tickets for the three playoff games to be played here would be given the first choice of seats, that the advance sale for single games would not begin until Wednesday, that no more than four tickets would be sold to any one person, that no reservations could be made by telephone and that no tickets would be held for later delivery.

The league officials decided that President-Manager Roy D. Schooley might determine the ticket prices for games here, but that all passes are barred. Schooley promptly announced that there would be no increase in prices for the title series. The lineup:

WILLIAM E. BENSWANGER

Benswanger, son-in-law of Barney Dreyfuss, has been named treasurer of the Pittsburgh Athletic Company, operating the Pirates, to succeed Sam Dreyfuss, who died recently from pneumonia.

BENSWANGER BUC TREASURER

At a special meeting of the directors of the Pittsburgh Athletic Company, operating the Pittsburgh Baseball Club, William E. Benswanger, of this city, son-in-law of President Barney Dreyfuss, was elected treasurer of the Pirates to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Samuel W. Dreyfuss on February 22.

The office of vice president, which had become vacant at the same time, was abolished, so that the election of the new treasurer completes the executive department and business organization of the club.

Treasurer Benswanger is 39 years old. He was born in New York on February 22, 1892, but has resided in Pittsburgh almost his entire life. He was educated in the public schools of this city and was graduated from the old Central High School.

He has long been actively interested in musical affairs in Pittsburgh, being president of the Pittsburgh Chamber Music Society, president of the Musicians' Club of Pittsburgh, though not a professional musician, a member of the advisory board of the Pittsburgh Symphony Orchestra, and a correspondent of New York musical journals.

During the World War he served in the Balloon Division of the United States Air Service.

WALTERS WINS, GETS DRAW AT MOOSE

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor

A capacity crowd last night sat in on one of the "fightingest" cards ever staged in the Moose Temple, with knockdowns and split decisions and one technical knockout featuring the program of flashy ring activity.

The 10-round main bout, between Jocko Joe Walters, Negro middleweight, of Springfield, O., and Pal Silvers, Jewish star, of New York, was such a thriller to an official draw that Promoter Apples Meyers immediately sought to rematch the pair for next week. In the 10-round semi-final, Johnny Warner, of Clairton, rallied from four momentary knockdowns in the opening round and one for a count of seven with the bell saving him in the fifth round to last the limit of 10 rounds and lose the decision to Mose Butch, of Oakland.

FLANAGAN STOPS NOLE

The referee halted the second bout with 27 seconds to go in the opening round to save Marcus Nole, local Negro middleweight, from further punishment after having been floored twice by Billy Flanagan, of Braddock, who had Frank Klaus and Battling Nelson, former world champions, in his corner. In the opener, Terry Waner, of the North Side, was given the referee's decision over Steve Senich, of Homestead, when the judges disagreed, Frank Brown voting for Senich and Frank Hogan for a draw. Senich did the more consistent work throughout and merited the award.

Walters was making his third appearance in the Moose ring and it was the first time he failed to knock out his opponent in a hurry. As was anticipated, he faced an acid test in the experienced Silvers, whose ring generalship enabled him to box a masterly defensive battle and keep matters interesting all of the way against the harder punching power and drive of Walters. As a matter of fact, Walters won every round after the first two, some by shades and others by more material margins, handing out such a terrific body thumping that it was remarkable that Silvers was able to stand up under it and retain his calm demeanor.

PAL STARTS FAST

Pal started out to give the young Negro threat a boxing lesson and he did that very thing in the opening round and repeated not quite as decisively in the second. Thereafter, although Walters' left eye was cut slightly in the fourth round, the tide turned. Walters was the stronger of the two and was able at all times to keep crowding the rangy and elusive Silvers before him and to smash and batter solidly to the body. Meanwhile, Silvers concentrated on jabbing and hooking lightly with his left and occasionally crossing his right or pumping it in during close-range exchanges. They fought toe to toe through the last two rounds, with Walters' heftier hitting giving him the advantage.

At the finish, Silvers was unmarked except for a crimsonsed midsection, but he plainly had lost the fight, despite his spectacular boxing exhibition. Judge Brown voted for Walters and Judge Hogan for Silvers, while Referee Grayber split his vote down the middle.

BUTCH BATTERS WARNER

Butch dropped Warner to his knees with the first punch of the other 10-rounder and battered him down three other times for no count and wrestled him down once in the opening round and probably could have stopped him in the next session if he had continued the fighting offensive, but he then turned to boxing and Warner came back and won the next three rounds by tapping his way inside and then making Mose cover from his body attack.

In the fourth round he dropped Butch for no count with a left to the body and he was continuing on his way to what looked like a surefire comeback for a victory until Mose decided to resume fighting again midway in the fifth round and battered him from pillar to post and finally knocked him down with a left half-uppercut, the bell ringing at the sound of seven. The last five rounds were a rout for Warner, who was glad to hear the final bell. He finished bleeding badly from the nose and with his left eye completely closed and with Butch easing up on him.

Noll, a southpaw, started off like a winner in the second bout, belting lefts to Flanagan's body and then finally clipping him as Flanagan pulled his head outside the top rope and propelling him onto the ring platform. Flanagan was back in the ring at the count of six and tearing into Noll against the ropes on the opposite side. He dropped Marcus for nine with a blow to the head, and, when Marcus got up reeling, he floored him again, this time for seven. He continued the barrage with Noll helpless in his own corner until the referee intervened.

SENICH MERITS DECISION

Waner was fighting back on the run during most of the opening bout, in which he dragged down the referee's decision, and failed to overcome the effects of Senich's steady plugging and punching.

The weights: Silvers, 158, and Walters, 160; Butch, 123½, and Warner, 123¼; Noll, 153½, and Flanagan, 160; Senich, 127½, and Waner, 126½.

Ray Eberle did the announcing, A. C. Couch and Tommy Grant were the timers and Dr. M. R. Goldman was the commission physician in charge.

Between Rounds

Bill Heckman has a new addition to his stable—Al White, a Negro welterweight, who has done most of his fighting in the South, where he has beaten Cecil Flowers, brother of Tiger Flowers; Kid McCoy, Battling P. G. and others. Heckman also has Johnny Haggerty, Tommy Ward and Casey Rhodes ready for bouts.

The switch that sends Joe Sekyra, of Louisville, in as a sub for Emmett Rocco, of Ellwood City, against Benny Touchstone, of Detroit, in the main bout at Motor Square Garden Monday night may or may not be a good one. It all depends. Both Touchstone and Sekyra are clever boxers for big fellows, and ordinarily two clever boxers pitted against each other do not make a good fight. Matchmaker Jules Beck is hoping that this case will turn out to be the exception that proves the rule.

Frankie Porto, of Glassport, and Lou Bloom, of Columbus, O., will box the main bout of a show at Wheeling, W. Va., April 7, with Jack Dempsey as the referee.

Young Joe Walcott, Negro welterweight, of Washington, Pa., will take the place of Teddy Welch against Ted Yarosz, of Monaca, in the eight-round semi-final to the Freddie Edwards-Freddie Fitzgerald bout at Canton, O., Monday night.

Dr. W. C. Fralick, of New York, the plastic surgeon who specialized in rebuilding broken hands for boxers, and who died yesterday, was a familiar figure in the ring game in recent years. Jack Zivic was one of the local mittmen who went to him for attention.

WHEELING FIVE ELIMINATED IN PLAY

BUCKHANNON, W. Va., March 21.—Hundred, last year's state champion, will play Huntington, winner of the Marshall College sectional tourney and Washington-Irving, of Clarksburg, last year's runner-up, will meet Parkersburg in the semi-finals of the eighteenth annual West Virginia state basketball tournament here this afternoon, with the experts picking the two 1930 finalists to battle it out again for the title.

WHEELING BEATEN

Hundred entered the tri-final round by taking a 23-to-22 win over Shinnston, when Bob Wassum's field goal in the last 30 seconds from midcourt brought victory.

Huntington had little trouble in downing Wheeling, which, until this game, was undefeated. The Cabell County team displayed an excellent slow-passing game that was effective throughout. The final score was 27 to 16.

Beckley held Washington-Irving, Clarksburg, on even terms during the first half, but faltered badly in the latter two periods and Clay Hites' five won, 30 to 16.

Parkersburg was forced to come from behind in the last five minutes to eliminate Buckhannon, 30 to 24. Barnum, crack Big Red ace, engineered an onslaught in the final period to overcome a lead.

TOURNEY IS SUCCESS

The tournament this year has been featured with the best display of basketball ever witnessed in a state court event and the large turnouts for each session on the West Virginia Wesleyan College floor more than stamp the approval of the annual event.

The semi-finals find two Northern and two Southern teams fighting for the 1931 state cage bunting. The semi-final round will start at 1:30 p. m. this afternoon. The morning session will be taken up with the preliminary rounds of the high school foul shooting contest, with the 16 sectional foul shooting champions competing.

A meeting of the West Virginia High School Coaches Association has been called for this morning by Coach Hol Slutz, of Huntington High School, and Paul Steinbicker, secretary.

BELL, BOROTRA IN NET FINAL

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP.)—Jean Borotra and Christian Boussus, of France, won the American indoor tennis doubles championship yesterday, defeating the Franco-American combination of Pierre Landry, of Paris, and Cliff Sutter, of New Orleans, the American intercollegiate champion, in a four-set final match.

The victory of Borotra and Boussus ended an afternoon of play in the American indoor championships which saw Berkeley Bell, Dallas, Tex., conquer Frank X. Shields, of New York, the favorite, 9-11, 6-4, 12-10 and 6-4, in the semi-finals of the singles play. Bell meets Borotra in the final today.

The doubles match resolved itself into a duel between Sutter and Borotra, with Boussus, ranked third behind Henri Cochet and Borotra in French tennis, and Landry, France's seventh ranking player, merely added attractions to a two-man show.

Sutter managed to pull the third set out of the fire and finally win it on his own service, 7 to 5, but the effort seemed to finish his play for the afternoon and the Frenchman ran out the final set 6-4 to win the title. The scores were 7-5, 6-4, 5-7 and 6-4.

Eight Yale Mermen Qualify; Record Falls

NEW YORK, March 21.—(AP.)—Yale qualified eight men for the finals to lead the field in preliminary competition of the twenty-fifth annual individual championships of the Intercollegiate Swimming Association here yesterday.

Five Navy swimmers gave the Midshipmen second place with six of the 34 places in the eight final events. Rutgers placed four men in five places while Pennsylvania and Princeton each qualified four men.

The outstanding performance of the day was furnished by August Harms, Jr., of Fordham University, who shattered the 300-yard national intercollegiate medley record. He was timed in 3:54 for the breast, back and free style combination swim, clipping one and two-fifths seconds off his own standard made in the I. S. A. title meet a year ago. In addition, Harms qualified for the final in the 200-yard breast stroke event.

Five others qualified for two events, led by George Kojac, of Rutgers, who qualified in the 100 and 220-yard free style swims.

YOUNG CORBETT WINS

SAN FRANCISCO, March 21.—(AP.)—Young Corbett, great southpaw welterweight from Fresno, served notice on the fistic world that he is still very much in the running for the title when he pounded out a 10-round decision over Paul Pirronne, of Cleveland, last night.

REVIEWS OF NEW FILMS; GOTHAM AND HOLLYWOOD GOSSIP

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

With appropriate civic pride we report that the local manufacturers of labels for whisky bottles have emerged from a quandary triumphantly.

William Pfarr

Recently at this label plant, which is reputed to be in the Hill district, there was a demand for Cointreau labels. Now Cointreau is one drink which has faded since prohibition, and the label manufacturers were perturbed. Here on the right were William Penn labels on the left Gordon gin labels and in between, beer labels.

To complicate matters, Cointreau is a French drink and the labels are in French. Well, the label men looked all over the plant but couldn't find anybody who spoke French. The matter was definitely settled by sending to good old France for a good old Cointreau label, and now if you want genuine Cointreau it's yours for the asking.

Charlie Margiotti, the Punxsutawney attorney who prosecuted Irene and Dague, is telling one now that will excite more than one oath among the countless newspapermen who covered the story.

It happened while the jury was out deliberating and the reporters needed a story. Judge Hildebrand received an anonymous telephone call, which later was traced to a drugstore in Pittsburgh. The caller informed the judge that if Irene and Dague were found guilty, he, Judge Hildebrand, and "that guy Margiotti" wouldn't be alive as long as Irene and Dague.

Judge Hildebrand told police of the call but otherwise said nothing.

The Broadway show, "The Gang's All Here," in which we wanted to see Vic Faust, the local bell-ringer, steal all honors, has closed. Vic wasn't given much of a chance to ring his bells, but at least he can come back to Capt. Menke's boat with that new Shaw and Lee story.

"That girl," says Shaw, "is so dumb she thinks a football coach has four wheels."

"Well," quizzes Lee, "how many has it?"

Coincidence: The local boy who introduced young Harry Harris to Jane Thurston is the one and the same person who gave Mr. Thurston that tear-gas gun.

They're reviving a story said to have been popular before Volstead and hanging it on a downtown speakeasy proprietor noted for the strict eye he kept on the cash register.

The speakeasy man had just hired a new bartender and had insisted that the bartender own a diamond ring and a race horse.

"You see," the boss explained, "if he already has 'em, he won't be trying to get 'em."

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 21.

To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Every state in the Union gambles as much as Nevada does, but they were smart enough to pass a law and get some tax money out of it. If Wall Street paid a tax on every "game" they run, we would get enough revenue to run the government on.

Will Rogers

Another thing, we don't seem to be able to check crime, so why not legalize it and put a heavy tax on it? Make the tax for robbery so high that a bandit couldn't afford to rob anyone unless he knew they had a lot of dough. We have taxed other industries out of business. It might work here.

Marion Davies Begins Work In Screen Version of 'Five and Ten'

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate.)

HOLLYWOOD, March 21.

First scenes were made yesterday on Marion Davies' new picture, "Five and Ten."

The Fannie Hurst novel will provide the star with a more dramatic role than she has played of late. As well as they liked "The Bachelor Father" and "It's a Wise Child," Metro Goldwyn-Mayer thinks that variety is desirable for the star.

Miss Davies will be supported by a notable cast, including Leslie Howard, Richard Bennett, Irene Rich and Kent Douglas (Douglas Montgomery). The latter has just been selected to play the star's brother.

Marion Davies

Robert Leonard again will direct.

BACK TO THE MOVIES

Fresh from the plaudits of London, Peggy Wood will soon head this way to make talking motion pictures.

For the past two years the actress has been playing in the Charles B. Cochrane production of "Bitter Sweet." She sails from London April 25, and, according to her Hollywood agent, Walter Herzbrun, will come directly to the coast.

Back in 1929, Miss Wood appeared in an M-G-M talkie, "Wonder of Women." She was well-liked, but her contract with Cochran prevented further motion picture work. Two of the big studios already are dickering for her services on her arrival here.

The actress' husband, John V. A. Weaver, is a writer on Paramount's staff.

LATEST GOSSIP

Hollywood was amused the other day to see all three of Gloria Swanson's ex-husbands around the same table at the Brown Derby. Wallie Beery and Herbert Somborn, Nos. 1 and 2, are very thick. Somborn calls Wallie "brother-in-law." . . . Fox's fears have been realized. Will Rogers has been injured at polo during a picture. The comedian's right arm was hit by a ball last Sunday, and he has carried it in a cast ever since. The cast is removable, so Rogers can act his scenes in "Cure for the Blues." . . . The New York censor board is said to have passed Norma Shearer's sophisticated "Strangers May Kiss" without a single change or elimination . . . Hoot Gibson plans to personally direct his forthcoming rodeo from the arena. The western star is giving away $25,000 in prizes. Cowboys from many states are to be entered in the events on April 25 and 26. Hoot once was all-around champion at a Pendleton round-up. . . .

Gloria Swanson

Greta Nissen has never been in a beauty shop, or so her press agent swears. Moreover, she doesn't use cosmetics off the screen . . . Mlle. Gabrielle Chanel, French fashion expert, startled Hollywood by declaring against the pajama fad. She appeared at a United Artists tea, dressed in the acme of quiet style. Whereupon some of the guests, expecting heaven knows what, passed the verdict that she doesn't dress well . . . After contributing measurably to the happiness of the nations, "Farina" has left "Our Gang." He was getting too big for the roles . . . Letters from London reveal that Mary Eaton is now in the third month of a revue, "Folly to Be Wise," and her husband, Millard Webb, is starting his second picture for British Gaumont.

Heinroth to Deliver Schubert Lecture

Tonight, instead of the usual recital program, in the Carnegie Music Hall, Dr. Charles Heinroth will deliver the fifth of a series of six lectures, the subject being "Schubert as a Symphonic Composer." Illustrating the lecture, Schubert's Symphony in C Major will be performed in an arrangement for two pianos, with Mr. Dallmeyer Russell assisting. The subject of the last lecture of the Lenten series on March 28 will be "The Cultural Value of Music."

Silent Comic

Charlie Chaplin remains true to his first love, pantomime, in "City Lights," which is on a third week in the Aldine.

POWELL CELEBRATION AND ROGERS' FILM IN STANLEY

By MILDRED FILLMORE

Camelot as Mark Twain never visioned it, is revealed in another screen treatment of the immortal humorist's "Connecticut Yankee in King Arthur's Court," now offered in the Stanley with Will Rogers as the star and the title abbreviated to "A Connecticut Yankee."

On the stage Dick Powell, happy master of ceremonies, is celebrating two years of appearances in Pittsburgh in a show, titled "Illustrations." And if it doesn't illustrate anything else, it illustrates that Mr. Powell continues to be popular.

In the new version of the film action begins when Rogers, as a radio dealer, goes to a mysterious house and there encounters the characters whom he meets again in Camelot when a something falls on his head and sets him back into the sixth century in the midst of King Arthur and his Knights of the Round Table.

MEETS THEM AGAIN

There he finds that William Farnum, whom he had met as an excited radio fan, is King Arthur; Myrna Loy, whom he had met as a mysterious lady, is Queen Morgan Le Fay; Maureen O'Sullivan, erstwhile a little girl in a queer mansion, is the Princess Alisande, but not the "Sandy" one remembers with delight, and all the others, not forgetting Merlin, the court wizard, of course.

Rogers, as Sir Boss, begins to earn that title by proving his "magic" superior to that of Merlin when he makes a cigar lighter "work" and assures the king that it really is greater magic than it appears to be. However, not much of the old story that is familiar remains except the general outlines.

Although it is not the best picture in which Rogers has appeared, it is amusing. It is that more because of the original witticisms of the star than because of the stunts introduced as novelties. Next to Rogers, William Farnum shines most brightly, his kingly role giving him opportunity to display his highly developed dramatic skill.

NEW SONG BY POWELL

A touch of the classical is given to the stage revue by the singing of Llora Hoffman. Her numbers win applause and receive kind accompaniment from the stage orchestra. A ventriloquist does a lot of amusing clowning. There are other entertainers, too, including the dancing chorus.

Mr. Powell sings about raindrops, a new song written by Harry Richman. He also puts his band through a burlesque specialty that gets the laughs. Bernie Armstrong bobs up in this dressed like a Quaker maid.

Opening audiences yesterday seemed to enjoy the program and accorded Mr. Powell an applauding "best returns of the day."

MOVIE STAR OPENS PROGRAM AT ENRIGHT

By MARGARET RUSSELL

James Hall, Hollywood star, is appearing at the Enright this week. He tells a couple of jokes, sings a couple of songs and receives much applause. He sings "Sweeping the Clouds Away" and "Maybe It's Love."

Lila Lee, supported by Sidney Blackmer, Fred Kohler, Raymond Hatton and J. Farrell McDonald, appears in an all-technicolor picture, "Woman Hungry." The beauty of the scenic effects of mountain and desert helps to make a far-fetched but virile story of the West into a good picture.

The stage show, a la "Hollywood," has two bright spots: an act of athletic prowess by two bronzed men, the Roma Brothers, and a fast-talking, wise-cracking, chest-slapping dialogue by two girls, Mack and Gray. Brian McDonald enters on his third week at the Enright by singing "Roses in Picardy."

Coffee is now being served on the mezzanine floor.

NEW STEAMER FOR RIVER TRIPS

D. W. Wisherd, traffic manager of the Steckfus Steamboat Line, of St. Louis, said today that the Steamer Washington, of his line, will be brought to Pittsburgh from St. Louis to handle the excursion trade out of this port this summer. It is the largest steamer on the river north of Cincinnati.

It will handle business formerly received by the Homer Smith, later the Greater Pittsburgh, recently destroyed by fire.

The Art Society closed its season last night, presenting Nathan Milstein, violinist, and George Trabert, tenor, in a long recital. Carnegie Music Hall was cozily filled and both soloists received enthusiastic acclaim.

Mr. Lissfelt

Milstein has played here once before, and then made an excellent impression by his quiet almost fastidious attention to delicate shadings. Since then, but a year ago, he has matured beyond most optimistic predictions, and he now makes music that sweeps one along in its torrent of beautiful tone, its finenesse, its restrained emotion. The easy play of his bow creates swiftest variations, or the superb cantilena of the Goldmark Concerto with utmost nonchalance, passages that entrance his audience with their outpouring of flawless tone.

Trabert was not so fortunate, laboring under an indisposition as the result of his crossing from Europe, where he has until recently been an opera star. In his aria from Weber's "Der Freisschuetz" and during the Strauss "Zueignung," given as encore, he displayed his voice to best advantage. That he is a musician and understands his songs well is obvious enough, and we are hoping there will be another occasion soon when he may show his art at its best.

Emanuel Bay played exceptionally fine accompaniments for Milstein and Earl Mitchell his best for Trabert.

During the intermission Dr. Heinroth announced the winner of the Martin Leisser Prize for the best original composition by a composer residing in Allegheny County. Henrietta Bodycombe won with her piano composition, "In a Stage Coach."

Then there's the one about the traveling salesman who was on a West Coast bound train, which also carried five Jewish Jentlemen who had beards all the way down to here. On the third day out the traveling man was going mad because he was lonely. He decided to break into the quintet's conversation, no matter what they thought about it.

Cornering the five bearded fellows in the smoking car, he said: "For heaven's sake, gentlemen, talk to me please! I am lonely. All of you are so ritzy or something. My name is Mefoofsky. What's your line?" The first replied: "I'm a tailor."

The second said: "And I'm a delicatessen man."

The third said: "I sell dress goods."

And the fourth chirped: "I'm a rabbi."

"And you?" inquired the traveling man of the unresponsive fifth.

"Oh," was the reply, "I'm a jeegolo!"

Al Jolson adores his 75-year-old father. Recently while in Washington, D. C., the Jolson home town, Al tried to keep the old gent amused with his routine of jokes, stories, gags, etc.

Jolson had his father in the parlor, and was telling him a gag, which he embellished with gestures and funny faces.

But the old man kept taking out his huge watch and looking at it, which finally got on Al's nerves.

"You're driving me crazy!" shrieked Al. "Here I am, your little boy, who is a star on the stage that people pay big money to hear sing or tell jokes, and I am telling you jokes, but all you do is look at your watch!"

"Sha, sha, sha," comforted the parent. "Tomorrow tal me jokes plizz—now is savan o'clock and is coming on Hamous hand Handy!"

MR. JACK OAKIE PANS TIN PAN ALLEY IN THE PENN

By CLARENCE E. GRUNDISH

"June Moon," another screen full of movie moonshine Hollywood has bootlegged from the stage, opened yesterday in the Penn. It is based on the Ring Lardner-George Kaufman play and it has to do with the goofs who write the popular songs and the girls who dig for gold in the Gotham bright spots.

Jack Oakie, who is a tabloid version of all the rubes since the world began, is featured. This time his one big ambition is to be a song writer. They're great fellows, he thinks, because they always remember their mothers and their old homes.

Oakie also goes in for murder in this one. And Webster's English is the victim. What he does to the language of the land makes Amos and Andy look like pikers.

In one episode he visits the aquarium and you think you're in for a fish song. But he figures he won't waste his talents on fish, so he contents himself with philosophizing. He believes the fish are happily married because they stay at home.

Once outside the aquarium the song urge again gets the best of him. He sees the moon and is inspired. "June moon," he murmurs with boobish ecstasy, while all about him is February night and snow.

And so it goes, with audience interest and laughter always there when Oakie is. But in those episodes where he isn't on view the film gets a little draggy. However, if you're an Oakie fan, you will find "June Moon" a comedy to your taste. In substance, it is Mr. Oakie "panning" Tin Pan Alley.

Supporting players include Frances Dee, Wynne Gibson, Sam Hardy, June McCloy and Ethel Sutherland.

A variety bill on the stage is titled "Broadway Revue." Its big feature is Jim Toney, lanky comic. Outside his head is barren as the proverbial billiard ball but inside are a lot of wisecracks new and old. He takes a good-natured slap at Pittsburgh, the Penn musicians and Clara Bow. And a good time is had by all.

Other entertainers include Peg Bates, a Negro dancer with a peg-leg, who gives a keen exhibition, and the Honey Family, an acrobatic group that whirl high and handsome. Rosemary Deering sings, and the Chester Hale Girls do some stepping.

Dick Leibert presents another organlogue and an added feature is the appearance of young Robert Conche and Baby Rose Marie in what is billed as a musical duet.

Guiser's Orchestra Sander's Feature

The weekly Saturday night cabaret dances at the New Sander's Inn, Freeport road, near Aspinwall, will be featured the next few weeks by Duke Guiser's Orchestra. The orchestra also will play during the Sunday night dinners.

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

Girl Loses Job Because She Is Married

Is her pay check just Luxury Money to a married woman?

Betty's boss thought so so he fired her.

Perhaps you agree with him. Perhaps you think Missis Working Wife is a Greedy Grasper, who is robbing other needier women—single women—of their bread and butter.

Has a Family

If you do there are plenty who will give you loud whoops of approval.

But Betty won't be among them. And before you convince yourself she's wrong switch your dial to her side of the broadcast.

"Dear Sally Martin:

"I don't know why I'm writing this letter but I'm just so mad I've got to talk to someone.

"I've just lost my job.

"They fired me because I'm married. The foreman where I worked said I didn't need it because jobs are just Luxury Money to married women.

"I have heard that argument lots lately. The unmarried are always throwing it up to the married ones. But here are the facts in my case—and there are hundreds, if not thousands like me.

"My husband makes $100 per month. We have two children. Even with my salary (when I had one) it was all we could do to feed and clothe those children right.

Work for Family

"As for new cars or new coats or dresses for me—they were out of the question. We are both working hard for the best thing there is—a family. We feel that I am entitled to a job because of that.

"On the other hand, lots of the single girls come to work in sealskin coats and chiffon stockings . . . and lots of them have fathers who can support them. If anyone is wasting money, aren't they?

"If people are to be given work according to their needs—who needs my job most? The single girls, who often use most of their money for clothes? or I who will use it for my children?

"Shouldn't a family of four be allowed at least $140 per month to live on? And if a man can't make that much, hasn't his wife a right to help out?

"And should employers have to investigate home conditions before they give a woman a job, just because she's married?

BETTY."

Common Argument

There you have one side of the argument that's raging today all over these United States.

Is it your side? Or do you think that Betty should sit at home, watching her babies grow thin and pale because they can't afford good fresh milk and clothing to keep them healthy and warm?

Has a wife a right to "help out" or hasn't she?

Often marriage for the modern Darby and Joan is impossible unless Joan does help.

Should marriage and homemaking be put off, then, until Darby has made his pile?

Which is best for Darby and Joan themselves . . .

Oh, These Women

By LEOLA ALLARD

A girl of 25 wants to marry a man of 45 and she asks if it really makes such a lot of difference.

It's not the first time the question has been asked and usually it's the girl who asks it. Men leap in and land where they may. Better gamblers, I suppose.

I've always had a sneaking notion that a difference in ages doesn't matter so much as a difference in spirit. If a girl of 25 has an old spirit a man of 45 might be a little too young for her. If she is young and the man is old spirited, it would make a whale of a lot of difference. If they are both happy and ageless, as so many people are, what possible difference can it make?

I hear these arguments constantly and older women who wish that they might get the man who wants to marry some young girl protest that it's a shame. I don't think there's any shame about it. I wouldn't want to marry an old cross fleit if I were 50 years young. I'd go and find me a girl with a spirit more atuned to mine.

I've known such very young people of 60, and such very old people of 25 that I may be pardoned for having such ideas.

I had dinner with a married couple, the girl 25, the man 45, and it would have been a shame if they hadn't found each other. The man is smart and well and very young, and he would be bored sick with a wife of 45 who thought she'd passed her girlhood and should settle whatever that is. There aren't as many of those people today as there used to be, but there are still too many of them. They count years only. Too many years make a little difference, but you can't blame men of middle age for not picking out midvictorian wives who like minuets if they themselves have kept step with the world and are on their toes dancing the twentieth-century two step.

What difference does it make what "people say"? Relatives have enough troubles of their own, it would be well if they attended to them. Friends want you to be happy so they don't get so critical. Bystanders don't matter at all—let them howl.

I think it's a lot safer for a young woman to marry a middle-aged man than for a young man to marry a woman who is too old. Perhaps it's because I like to see men appreciate and take care of wives, and older men have usually learned some early lessons that help them to do this perfectly. Young men are too likely to feel hampered by the care they would receive, prompted by the motherly instincts of women who are twice their age. If a woman has no children she mothers a young man too much. Somehow young men don't care for mothering. That's the thing that irks them in that kind of marriage. And it's difficult for an older, motherly woman to act coy. She isn't attractive when she tries.

All women young or old want appreciation. Older men are so much more capable of giving this than the whippersnappers who haven't learned about women. Older men picking wives, usually know what they want. They know how to take care of it when they get it. That's somewhat better than trying to make a young one understand that the world is NOT full of women as good or better than the one he got.

Horoscopes

Sunday, March 22

Sunday's horoscope is a splendid one for affairs of church, charity and mystical and spiritual matters, with every promise of these bringing advancement growth and prosperity, as well as conspicuous position or achievement in these connections. Secret matters should flourish or strategic methods succeed.

Those whose birthday it is may anticipate a prosperous and progressive year with recognition or preferment from employers or benefits at the hands of those in power, financial solidity and willingness to foster large projects. It is advisable to seek these or to deal with large interests or secret bodies, with new contracts probable.

A child born on this day should be versatile, creative and ambitious and should be capable of handling big deals of an intriguing nature to its own prestige and power. It should gain the indorsement of employers or those in strong places.

Monday, March 23

Monday's astrological forecast is one foreshadowing the removal of a long continued obstacle of conditions of frustration, this to be followed by a desired change fostering definite constructive work after this irksome stagnation and delay. It would be well to make contracts or sign writings in promoting this new effort with an eye to subtle misrepresentations or clever fraud. Also be careful in the personal relations lest there be friction or inharmony.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a year in which some long-thwarting condition or tenacious obstacle will be removed, making room for constructive effort in new directions. But make contracts and sign all writings with care, lest there be loopholes for clever fraud or misunderstanding. Also be tactful in the personal relations.

A child born on this day should be steady, industrious and skillful. It may suffer in its personal life through jealousy or subtlety.

FAR, FAR AWAY

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

There was a song once sung more than it is now—was it a hymn? or a saccharine love-chant? You can hear it if you listen to some lively grandma hustling about in her kitchen. She will probably not know the rest of the words. She will rattle, and beat things, and close the oven-door on delectable smells, and between comings and goings there will come sudden high, contented, outbursts of "SOME SWEET DAY . . . FAR, FAR AWAY!"

"Far—FAR away!" It has a nice sound, hasn't it? It conjures things. It has engine bells and the rickety-rack of steel rails in it, the blast of a steamer whistle, the rustle of palms, the wash of jade water, the sweet, sweet, herby perfume of the blue-green sagebrush, the mocking-bird notes of the south, the sun-on-roses of the California coast, the rush of water-fall in Newfoundland, the wind in the pinons above the desert—oh, my lordy—does it make you, when you get surfeited with the monstrous front pages of Pittsburgh just now, does it make you long to be there—in that Far, Far Away?

There are lucky young persons sitting right now on a high sagebrushed table-land, contemplating sweet silence save for the wind, hardly conscious of that disturbance on the horizon that is Pittsburgh.

There is romance there. Once there was lots of romance in Pittsburgh.

Madge Pays a Mental Tribute to Mr. Owen.

At the sound of Charles Owen's voice asking what was the matter with the stag line, I felt as if someone had just thrust a hand into the nerves of my spine and twisted them. My fear and dislike of the man were so strong that I was not sure whether I could conquer them sufficiently to answer him with the casual pleasantness which his query demanded.

Harry Underwood's drawl gave me the moment necessary to pull myself together and I wondered if he purposely had intervened—as he so often had done before—between me and a task which must later be faced, and for which I needed preparation.

"Do you think it's stage fright, Owen, or mulishness?" he asked. "Of course, God's gift to American girlhood over there"—he gestured to young Cameron who stood by himself, watching the dancers—"is simply basking in the limelight while he decides to which girl he intends to drop the handkerchief. But those cadets—they're well-bred youngsters or I wouldn't have invited them—know that they are last-minute guests, so they didn't line up for the first dance. But they ought to be cutting in by now if only to pay for their supper. They don't teach bashfulness at West Point, you know, so I'm afraid they're savoring with delight the languishing glances most of the girls are casting their way."

"Marion isn't," Lillian said indignantly, and her husband laughed indulgently.

"You mean she's clever enough so that no casual glance could detect it. My dear, Marion wouldn't be a normal girl if she weren't speculating which one of those cadets means to cut in on her, and if she will be one of the first girls honored."

"I suppose so," Lillian sighed resignedly, and Mr. Owen spoke again.

"They need a bellwether," he said. "Will you excuse me, Mrs. Underwood?"

"He bowed to Lillian whose dinner and theater partner he had been and waiting only for her startled nod, walked across the dance floor, a distinguished looking figure but reminding me irresistibly of a softly padding panther.

He passed the cadets with a laughing word, but did not pause, walking straight across the dance floor and tapping the shoulder of the college boy who was dancing with Carolyn. I paid a mental tribute to his cleverness. I guessed that he wished to dance with Marion—he meant to lose no opportunity of increasing the girl's childish admiration for her "roomie's uncle"—but he would make the action appear a perfect natural one by first cutting in on his young niece.

"Some dancer, that lad!" Harry Underwood commented as we fascinatedly watched the perfect rhythm of Mr. Owen's movements. "And he's turned the trick. See the ships of the line getting into action?"

We laughed as we saw the three young men who had been watching the dancers come to life almost in unison and stride across the dance floor. As I expected young Cameron went straight to Mary's side and tapped Noel lightly on the shoulder. But Noel did not cut in on any other man, only stepped back and stood watching his lovely fiancee floating around the hall in young Cameron's arms.

For "floating" was the only word to express the progress of those two around the ballroom. All the rest were graceful dancers, Ronald, Carolyn, Marion and one of the cadets was especially good. But there was something so different in the blended rhythm with which Mr. Cameron swept Mary around the floor that, despite my prejudice against the young talkie star, I found myself enjoying the picture they made and was slightly resentful when one of the collegians who had been tapped and relegated to the stag line took Mary away from Mr. Cameron.

There was no more cause for complaint about inaction on the part of the stag line. The cadets had gone straight to Marion and Carolyn as if invisible lines were pulling them, and thus set the seal of expert approval upon their belleship. But they scarcely had circled the dance floor once before they were banished again, and from that time on there was a merry war between the Army and Yale, in which football did not figure.

"Charlie's a spoil sport," Helena Brixton said as she watched him dancing with Marion and skillfully eluding the attempts of the younger men to cut in. "He has so much experience and such superior technique that he can keep them off longer than one of themselves. He's gotten them started now, and he ought to know enough to come back. There's room enough in this ballroom for everybody, and we chaperones ought to have a share in it. But if Charlie stays out there——"

Household Hints

Keep your box of matches close to the stove. Don't cross the kitchen 20 minutes a day just for a match.

If your table silver is badly scratched remove the marks with a paste made of olive oil and putty powder. Rub the paste gently on the marks with a soft cloth. Then wash silver in clear, cold water.

Cooking asparagus isn't a bit difficult, really. It does take much longer to cook the stalks than the tips, so when cooking that delicacy, place it in an upright position in boiling water and let the tips steam.

Soiled yarn may be washed and used again if it is wound into a skein and tied in several places so the skein is held loosely. After washing hang in the sun and when dried, it will be soft, clean and like new yarn.

Save all the threads pulled in straightening the edge of the new table cloth and put them away in your embroidery cotton book. Then when the linen gets to the mending stage these threads can be used for darning with a far better result than when darning linen with a cotton thread.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

To be charming, a woman must have charming thoughts. To be nice to other individuals, one must think pleasantly about them. Amiability oils the wheels of human existence and puts upon the human phiz a radiance that no cosmetic can impart.

Stys are small boils. A germ invades the house in which an eyewinker lives and has its being, and the trouble starts. Proper treatment consists of frequent applications of hot compresses, pads of gauze dipped in a hot boric acid solution. Pink eye, a local inflammation, requires the services of a medical man. Eyes have their own oiling systems and tear ducts furnish bathing facilities.

Girls who suffer from self-consciousness, which is fear, should cultivate good, healthy conceit. Chances are they are as smart, good looking and attractive as the girls they envy. The mother of the shy little daughter who is timid in the presence of strangers should praise the child, help her to cultivate confidence in herself, and gain self-respect. Self-consciousness begins in childhood. It brings unhappiness.

When the complexion takes on tucks and accordion pleats it is because the underlying adipose padding has lost tone and become discouraged. As the fibers fall into a state of dissolution the skin furrows. Sometimes this state of affairs is the result of malnutrition, though worry and sleeplessness will bring it about, and the habit of pulling down the lip corners has something to do with it. The remedy is found in daily oilings with a tissue building cream and the addition of milk to the diet.

Warm baths, with plenty of friction with a heavy brush, soothe nerves that are curling at the edges. They make for cheerfulness and well being and create a natural impulse to lift up the voice and yodel, as one engages in scouring, rinsing and showering. The bath is a marvelous pickup treatment after a day of fretful activities; it stimulates the blood streams and takes knots out of tired muscles. The time for the cold bath is in the morning. It takes courage to face it, but it gives courage to face the day's job.

When a woman has come to the conclusion that nothing much is worth kicking up a fuss about, that good nature attracts affection and friendship, and ill nature drives them away, she takes on a luminous aura of charm. She becomes a delightful and restful companion. There are no chips on her shoulder. She is not spoiling for a fight. She has learned that a strong quality of character is the ability to get along amicably with one's fellow creatures, and she wears upon her countenance a serenity that is more beautiful than perfection of features.

Danger Lurks for Baby in Kindest Kisses.

Dr. Copeland

Recently I received a letter requesting me to write on "the dangers of kissing babies on the lips." Of course, nobody should abuse a baby this way. The dangers attached to this custom are numerous and too little attention is paid to them.

Infants differ markedly from adults in that they do not possess "immunity" to disease. They are easily infected by ailments that would not touch the adult.

By immunity is meant the power of the body to ward off disease. This protection against a given disease is obtained in two ways. One way is by actually having the disease. The other is by being exposed to the disease in such mild form as not to contract it. In medicine these means of protection are spoken of as "active" and "passive" immunity.

Immunity may be obtained by the injection of certain bacterial products, which build up a defense of the body against certain diseases. This is demonstrated in the inoculations against diphtheria and scarlet fever. It is accomplished in similar fashion when you are vaccinated against smallpox or inoculated against typhoid fever.

Infants are daily exposed to different forms of bacteria. As they grow older they build up a defense against these germs of disease. This defense is further strengthened by the vaccinations and injections I have just mentioned.

If the baby is exposed to germs that it has not encountered before, or if these germs be in overwhelming numbers, then there is trouble. If the baby is in poor health that day, it will succumb to whatever infection comes along.

Kissing the baby's lips affords an excellent means of transferring germs from your lips. Usually germs are present on your face and lips, not harmful to you, but of great danger to the infant. Adults, unknown to themselves, are sometimes carriers of diseases. Why subject the baby to these dangers?

It must be admitted that it is a temptation to kiss the sweet baby. Too often we forget the dangers attached to this practice. If you must kiss the baby, apply your lips to the forehead or head, but not to the infant's lips. Never permit a stranger to kiss your child, certainly, and better still, include yourself and the rest of the family in the prohibition.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

When Wearing Watch Is Out Of Place

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please advise me if it is improper to wear a small white gold wrist watch with an evening gown and silver slippers? I have been told that it is improper, but I would like to verify that fact. B. C.

I always hesitate to answer this question in the way I consider correct, for fear that someone with an especially beautiful watch, one with, say, a diamond crystal, or one full of marvelously beautiful gems, will say, as Diamond Jim Brady is reported to have said when someone questioned the taste of his wearing so many jewels, "Those as has 'em, wears 'em."

To my taste, a watch, no matter how beautiful it is, is thoroughly out of place with evening clothes, formal or semi-formal. Time should be put behind us at the end of the day, and it never seems appropriate to me to see a wrist watch with evening clothes.

However, it is obvious that this is a question for every woman to settle for herself. She would certainly be on the safe side if she didn't wear a watch with her evening clothes.

Rules and Regulations for Mourning

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please tell me how long a widow should wear a veil? My mother and I are wearing black now, and we would like to know if white would be proper during the summer months instead of black? READER.

Customarily nowadays widows do not wear veils . . . so informal has the wearing of mourning become. But if the widow wishes to wear a veil, of course it is correct, and she wears it as long a time or as short a time as she wishes. All of the former "rules and regulations for mourning" have been brushed aside, and now everyone does what she finds most convenient, most comfortable, easiest for her.

The wearing of all-white is as "deep mourning" as the wearing of all-black. But to keep the mourning really "deep" no black accessory should be worn. And this all-white form of mourning is most properly worn in the summer, and in the home at all seasons of the year.

Suitable Attire

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am to have four tables of bridge in the evening, both ladies and gentlemen, the men being alumni brothers of my husband's, but only casual acquaintances of mine, while some of the ladies are very good friends of mine, and others I have not met. We are entertaining at home and I wish to know if I, as hostess, could properly wear a very clever three-piece suit of lounging pajamas, or if they should be reserved for my intimate friends? D. T.

Under the circumstances . . . and they are, indeed, very definite circumstances . . . I recommend that you wear a more formal attire. Then there will be no occasion for comment.

KNOCK THAT COLD IN A JIFFY

Here's Relief Almost Before You Know It

If you want quick relief from a cold, go back to first principles and use something you know does the business—don't start "trying" a lot of fancy ideas or remedies. Even a "little" cold is too dangerous to take chances on.

Get Hill's Cascara Quinine. A scientific formula made to do ONE THING WELL; to knock a cold in a jiffy not to cure a hundred different things.

Take two tablets now. Then follow directions on box. Drink lots of water, too—that's all. Soon those mean, aching pains in head and body begin to go; the cold breaks up; poisons leave your system. Almost before you know it, you feel like a new person.

If it doesn't do that, your money back. Get a box now. You'll be surprised at the speed with which it works. Costs only a few cents.

QUICK RELIEF FROM CONSTIPATION

That is the joyful cry of thousands since Dr. Edwards produced Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards, a practicing physician for 20 years, and calomel's old-time enemy, discovered the formula for Olive Tablets while treating patients for chronic constipation and torpid livers.

Olive Tablets do not contain calomel, just a healing, soothing vegetable laxative safe and pleasant.

No griping is the "keynote" of these little sugar-coated olive colored tablets. They help cause the bowels and liver to act normally. They never force them to unnatural action.

If you have a "dark brown mouth"—bad breath—a dull, tired feeling—sick headache—torpid liver—constipation, you should find quick, sure and pleasant results from one or two of Dr. Edwards Olive Tablets.

Thousands take them every night to keep right. Try them. 15c, 30c, 60c.

Margaret Studies Actress During Performance

CHAPTER XXXII.

She made a little, indistinct murmur, put up one slender hand as if she interposed it, blindly, between herself and her fate. She loved him so very much. It was as if, in a sense, she had created him, bringing him back from the darkness in which he had stumbled. He was not only her lover therefore but her creation, as if he had been her child. There was more in her love for him than the beautiful shallows of physical attraction, now warm and sunny, sparkling and stimulating, now moving slowly, darkening, over the hidden rocks.

There was tenderness and high hopes and ideals and a comradeship that had grown all these weeks in which they had been together, weeks in which they had come to know one another, not starting as most people do, from a basis of absolute ignorance, one of the other, but from a basis which was composed of their supposed preknowledge of each other . . . a background, as it were, of old loyalties and intimacies.

"So hard?" he asked again, as she did not speak.

Asks More Time

Well, it would soon be over. Margaret would have decided tonight. Had, perhaps, decided by now. Whatever she decided, Mary Lou must go, must lose this Eden. She couldn't go on, putting him off, evading . . . She couldn't. She looked about her, a little wildly. The flowers sprang from their pots and jars of colored stone, the hyacinths she had come to hate, the tulips, the narcissus. Plants give out color and fragrance. The voice of the fountain spoke to her, sang in her blood.

She turned suddenly. Better a half truth, perhaps. Better . . . oh, not for him, for soon he'd know the truth and everything would seem lies when he looked back. Better for her, however, easing her heart, a very little. When he knew, he'd despise her, he'd think every word she had uttered a falsehood. So it didn't matter, did it, if for the sake of a small cold comfort, she told him . . . that she cared.

"I do care for you, Lorry," she said clearly, "and you have been dear and patient . . . and so good to me. I care—a lot. It—oh, the whole thing was so strange, thinking you dead all this time, seeing you again an entirely different person, as I was an entirely different person. I—I couldn't just go on where we'd left off. And now—I don't know," she said desperately. "I don't know. If—if you'd give me a little more time—a week perhaps—a month . . . ? Things aren't clear between us, yet," she told him; "we've kept away from certain subjects because it seemed best. There are things I haven't told you," she said, unhappily; "could you trust me a little longer?"

He drew a deep breath. It was the first time that she had admitted anything at all. He felt that much lay beyond her admittance, much that she had not put into words. There was something that troubled her, held her back, he fancied, something deeper than her rather inadequate excuses. Perhaps—perhaps there had been another man, in all those years. Someone she had thought she cared for. Strange, that he had never speculated on that possibility since she had returned to him, although, God knows, it had agonized him sufficiently before her return! His heart ached a little, thinking. But how natural—in all those years, young and lovely, many men must have found her beloved. . . .

Whatever she had to tell him would make no difference. He loved her. If she loved him, that was all that mattered.

"I don't want to force you," he said, slowly, "and you've already made me very happy. I'm grateful . . . beyond words. Take all the time you want . . . and when you are ready . . . I'll be waiting. I can't believe, though, that you would have given me this much hope unless, for my waiting, you were promising a reward. I haven't kissed you," he said abruptly, "for a very long time . . ."

He leaned near and put his arms about her, gently.

"Ah, don't!" she said, pitifully.

Returns His Kiss

"Do you mean that? Say you mean it, swear to me you mean it, and I will let you go."

But she said nothing. There was nothing she could say. She was quite still in his embrace . . .

"Just—tonight," he urged . . . "There's Jenny and Larry—and a dozen other youngsters, happy, in love, holding each other close . . ."

Her eyes closed. He kissed the broad white lids, kissed the curve of her cheek where it melted rosily into the smooth, red satin of her lips, kissed, finally, with tenderness, with passion, the quivering little mouth.

Suddenly she twisted in his arms and, her hands desperately on his shoulders, gave him back his kiss, abandoning herself to it, surrendering . . . yielding. Then, with a little sob, she freed herself almost brusquely and rose to her feet and walked back into the great lighted room.

Lorrimer followed her, his heart singing. As he reached her, in the curved doorway, he touched her arm . . .

"Delight?" he asked . . . and lower—"darling?"

"Please," said Mary Lou, in a curious, cool little voice . . . "please—forget that, Lorry. It was—madness. I have your promise," she told him, "and—and I'll keep my word to you, when the time comes . . ."

"But why—why?" he asked, halting her, there in the doorway.

"Music," said Mary Lou, "and madness . . . and being young . . . and . . . Lorry, don't make me—ashamed!"

One of the Wynne boys stepped up to claim her.

"No fair letting that big brute monopolize you!" he announced, for all the world to hear.

She danced away, then, moving gracefully, automatically. She was not "ashamed." Not even sorry. She . . . she had been mad to suffer his kiss, still more insane to return it, as she had returned it, with all the ardor of her body, heart and soul. But she was glad!

Margaret Sees Actress

"I—He'll hate me anyway," she told herself savagely, "and I wanted something to remember," she said to herself, "something of my own, something that was honest. He'll never know," said Mary Lou to her heart, "how honest and how much his own I was—just for a minute."

Meanwhile Margaret Lorrimer and Dr. Mathews sat through the colorful inanities of the imported revue, which dragged itself out until almost midnight, as is the way of first nights. It had opened out of town, had been twice rewritten and three times cut, before the New York opening, and would be due for more cutting after tonight. The audience was, as usual, distinguished — distinguished, that is, by the bored attendance of critics and the late arrival of society people, and the early arrival of various stage dignitaries. There were enough jewels and bare shoulders in the house to grace the Horseshoe Circle at the Metropolitan.

"I do care for you," she said clearly.

There was a good comedian, and a leading woman who was pretty and graceful and charming and who scored, obviously, a real personal triumph. There were plenty of good-looking show girls and many specialty numbers, good, bad and indifferent. But it is probable that neither Mrs. Lorrimer nor Dr. Mathews could have given a coherent description of the piece or of anyone in it, save of the small, vivacious little person billed as Diana Hackett, and about whom rumors flew, from lipsticked mouth to lipsticked mouth, in the lobby, between acts, while tuxedoed gentlemen listened skeptically and critics smiled wearily.

"This Hackett woman . . . rather good looking, isn't she? They say her father's an Earl or something.

"Diana Hackett? Lady Diana. I've heard. She can't act, of course . . ."

"Well, decent of her not to use the title, anyway!"

"She hasn't kept it a secret, though, one notices."

"Sweet are the uses of publicity!"

But she was only a very small part of the evening to the majority of the audience, and the entire evening to Margaret Lorrimer and her old friend.

Diana—the real Delight—was attractive behind the footlights. The tired lines, the hard molding of her face, disappeared in the flattering glow; make-up concealed a great deal. She was, however, no actress. Still, she sang passably; she wore clothes—what there were of them—gracefully, and with authentic chic, and she did something she called dancing, well enough. She had personality, a gay friendliness toward her audience. And she worked hard. She had to work hard, poor creature, for this was her big chance, unexpectedly arrived at and seized with God knew what hope and relief, to stage a real "come back," to make something of herself, to eat three meals a day for an indefinite time.

After the first act Mrs. Lorrimer spoke, very low, to Mathews. She had been tense as fine strung wire at the first appearance of the woman she had come to see, and to judge. Now she relaxed a little.

Mrs. Lorrimer was silent for a minute. Then she said:

"Dan, I don't know what to do!"

"You'll do what's right, what's best, Margaret," he told her, strongly.

"And that is?" she questioned.

He twisted his program in his hands.

"I can't presume to advise you," he replied, quietly. "You'll have to work this out for yourself. Take your time, think it over. You'll be sick and sorry all the rest of your life if you commit an injustice. But it is up to you, Margaret. Whatever you do, I'll stand by," he assured her, needlessly.

She smiled at him gratefully.

"Of course," she answered, "I know you will. But—Oh, I wanted to see her for myself. And now I have seen her. I know I can't judge her by just this business of sitting in an audience. Yet intuition is a strange thing, Dan. I'm perfectly convinced, sitting here, that—that he'd never be happy with her."

Mathews said, after a pause:

"You can't think of that now. You must find out how much of a claim she has on him. After all—if she is his wife—?"

DAILY TRUE STORY— The Test

George White and Silas Richards, senior and junior members of the house of White and Richards, Importers of Costume Jewelry, were in conference. They were considering the advisability of adding perfumes to their list of importations. Samples stood upon the desk in little vials. A business conference, however, between these two was an elastic thing. They talked of this and that.

George White, senior member, leaned back in his chair, regarding Silas with a look of pity. Otherwise, he looked about as a senior member might be expected to look—rather handsome in a dark way, well groomed, oldish. Silas had just made a statement, with an air of quoting. This is what he had said:

"Love without faith, is a poor thing."

"That may be true Si, but the fact remains that women do not trust their husbands. They may pretend to, but they don't—really. They expect us to be bad, and so," he finished with a rather bitter smile, "we are bad!"

"Not my wife!" Si was emphatic. "Not Helen. Why, you couldn't get her to believe a thing against me!" And then because he knew his partner's wife so well, he felt apologetic. He added with a rueful smile. "With this face I have, she knows I just naturally have to be good."

Expensive Glove

George made a sound remarkably like a snort, if senior members can be said to snort. "You just wait until she thinks she has something on you," he said, closing the argument by swinging around to his desk. "Now, about this perfume—"

Si could not seem to leave it at that.

"Look here," he said, "you are all wrong and I'll prove it to you. He took something out of a drawer. "Now here," he said, "is something I found on the bus this noon, when I went after the samples." He held up a slim gray glove, of the type known as "slip-on."

George took it. "Rue de la Paix" he guessed. He looked inside the glove. "Yes, it is imported, just as I thought. Beautiful, isn't it? Hardly the kind of thing one would expect to find on a bus. It rather hints of a town car and real pearls."

Si took it. "All the better," he remarked. "Now, just to show you—I'll take this glove home in my pocket—let her find it—and then you'll see."

"But I won't be there to see," objected the older man. It was not, he thought, much of a plan.

"You have taken my word before this," said Si quietly.

"All right Si, but here," the senior partner was irritated by the other's insistence—"let's make this a real test." He took up one of the little vials and poured a few drops from it upon the gray glove. A heavy exotic scent filled the room. It made one think of dark eyed dancing girls.

"Your wife is a woman of taste," he said sardonically, "if she likes the perfume, we will launch it. But," he added, "I don't think she will like it." He stuffed the glove into Si's pocket where it made no bulge at all. "Now," he said relentlessly, "call your wife and tell her you won't be home for dinner—you have a business conference." Si was reluctant.

Guilty Conscience

"You poor sap, it will be true. We will eat some place and then come back here and decide about the perfume." He gave the operator Si's number and handed the instrument over. Helen's cool well modulated voice came faintly over the wire.

"Yes?"

Si, quite unprepared, stuttered and stammered.

"You poor devil," said George, when he finally hung up. "But, remember—you brought it on yourself!"

After a leisurely dinner they were back again "in conference." Helen will probably telephone here, checking up on you," said George amusedly, "so if the telephone rings don't answer it."

It was 12 o'clock when Si finally reached home. It had begun to rain as he sprinted up the steps of their charming little house, which was unmortgaged, he congratulated himself as he had done many times before, on being such a lucky, lucky fellow.

Helen met him in the hall. Si's feeling of guilt made him unusually demonstrative.

"Hello, sweet thing." He hugged her tightly to him. "You look nice in that dress." Si thought Helen very beautiful. As a matter of fact, she owed her reputation for looks to her smooth, clear skin and really incredibly long eyelashes. People sometimes suspected her of having had them pasted on. And then she knew how to dress, being skillful about matching her eyes and hair—and careful about lines.

Si followed her into the pleasant living room where a wood fire was burning, the first of the season.

"Golly, that feels good!" He promptly shed his coat. More than a whiff of perfume arose upon the air. He groaned to himself as he sank into his favorite chair. "Now for it," he thought.

"Si," she said finally, with the air of one who can't stand it any longer, "did you bring me something?"

"Why—no," he said in what he hoped was a natural manner.

"Oh, you did, too, you old scamp—I smell it!" She plunged an eager hand into his pocket and pulled out the slim gray glove.

"Oh!" she said in an odd voice. Si tried to be casual.

"Oh—I forgot about that. I found it on the bus this noon." She was still a minute and Si watching her face began to wish that he had not begun this thing. Then she began to laugh.

"Why, how odd. How very odd! I lost it myself this very morning. It must have been on that bus. I didn't want to take the car—it's so hard to park," she went on rapidly. "I went to a sale and I had so many bundles I wasn't at all surprised to find I had lost something. It is so annoying to lose a glove," she said ruefully, "the one remaining is so useless—I just threw it away."

Si laughed in huge relief.

"Never mind, honey, I'll buy you some more. It certainly was odd my finding it, wasn't it?" Thank heaven that was over. Now he could read in peace. Wouldn't old George laugh when he told him how it had turned out! Then he thought of something George had said and looked up from his book.

"Oh, by the way, honey, that perfume you smell is a sample, we are thinking of putting in a line. How do you like it?" Helen looked at him.

Retires for Evening

"I don't like it," she said. Then she arose. "I think I'll go to bed, my head aches." She threw the glove into the wastebasket.

"All right, honey, I'll be up soon. Is there anything I can get you—?" he called after her. She shook her head and went quickly up the stairs.

When he came up an hour later Helen was apparently sound asleep. Her breathing was regular and her long silky lashes lay quietly on her smooth cheeks.

"Sweet thing," he thought—"wouldn't she be wounded if she knew that her love had been questioned, tested, in such a crude way! In a very short while he was sound asleep.

Helen opened her eyes and lay staring at nothing there in the darkness.

"Oh the wretch—he can sleep! He thinks he's safe. How relieved he was when I got him out of it. I shouldn't have done it. I should have thrown the thing in his face! I'll find out who she is. I'll find out. I'll make George tell me. He'll know. These men always hang together, but I'll make him tell. Oh, Si! How could you, how could you! I trusted you so!"

HEAVENLY DAYS, HOW QUIET AND RESTFUL THIS HOUSE IS SINCE WE GOT RID OF NIMROD AND LUCILLE. WHAT A HULLABALOO WE WENT THROUGH WHILE YOU AND NIMROD WERE SO EXCITED ABOUT THAT $10,000 BILL THAT, AFTER ALL, WASN'T WORTH A NICKEL.
IT'S STILL PRACTICALLY IMPOSSIBLE FOR ME TO BELIEVE THAT BILL WAS ABOUT AS IMPORTANT AS AN OLD SET OF FALSE TEETH.
HA, IT DOES ME GOOD TO KNOW HOW LUCILLE MUST BE GRINDING HER TEETH WITH DISAPPOINTMENT. WELL THAT AFFAIR DIDN'T BREAK MY HEART NO SIR! I KNEW RIGHT FROM THE BEGINNING THAT $10,000 BILLS DIDN'T FLOAT AROUND LIKE SNOW IN WINTER.
I'LL ADMIT A $10,000 BILL IS OUT OF THE ORDINARY EVEN IF IT WAS FOUND IN FRONT OF THE MINT
I WISH I COULD HAVE SEEN LUCILLE'S FACE WHEN SHE REALIZED THAT ALL HER CATTY SCHEMING HADN'T DONE ANY GOOD. POOR THING! WHAT A COMEDOWN THIS IS FOR ANYONE WITH SUCH UTTERLY SUPERIOR NOTIONS.
WELL, SUCH IS LIFE. I LOST $10,000 - AND GOT $1000,000 WORTH OF EXPERIENCE

Uphold Living Standards

The American system of government and business is menaced distinctly less by Communist agitators than by misguided bankers who have been urging a deliberate letdown in the American standard of living.

The Hearst newspapers have long felt that it was a business necessity, as well as a wise social policy, for American industry to encourage an improving average standard of living.

This humane goal cannot be attained through destructive wage cutting, but only by an increment in the purchasing power of wages.

We find support of this viewpoint by a notable outside economic authority, Dean Wallace Brett Donham, of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration. In a challenging forthcoming book entitled "Business Adrift," Dean Donham thoughtfully concludes:

"AS SCIENCE AND MANAGEMENT PROGRESS, STANDARDS OF LIVING FOR MANY MILLIONS MUST GO UP STEADILY OR CAPITALISM IS DOOMED, AND SECURITY FOR CAPITAL CANNOT LONG EXIST APART FROM AN EQUITABLE DIVISION WITH LABOR OR APART FROM SECURITY FOR LABOR."

That is a clear and distinct warning from an able scholar to small minded men in high places.

The way out of the depression is clouded by the fallacious thinking of economic reactionaries, who think they see in the present economic maladjustment an opportunity to deflate labor.

If private industry is to endure, it must rest on social sanctions.

The major task of business management today is to remove the blockades which prevent a superabundance of available goods from flowing through trade channels to consumers.

Lack of confidence in the future and fear of wage cuts and unemployment have resulted in timid, subnormal consumer-buying.

President Hoover takes the view that the time has come for normal buying policies.

Industrial and banking leaders can contribute to the breaking down of trade barriers by espousing constructive policies and repudiating false doctrines.

A vast domestic market of 125,000,000 souls is ripe to be cultivated anew, and only timidity, a spirit of defeatism and fallacious doctrines delay the far-reaching business recovery which will flower as soon as consumers recognize that the business future assures economic security to competent and energetic workers.

The depression has been the heavy price that business in the large has paid for improving machinery but NEGLECTING THE HUMAN FACTOR IN TRADE.

In the future, human welfare and business prosperity must advance arm in arm.

Kline Is Right in This

Mayor's Disapproval of Rooney Bill Is Welcome—Brief Comment on Local News.

Mayor Kline's statement that he is not in favor of the Rooney bill, which would put the school board back in politics, is welcome. Now if the Mayor should not be content with passive opposition, but should vigorously oppose the measure, its defeat would be certain.

The prudent course for the citizens to follow is not to let themselves be lulled into a false sense of security, but to assume that the Rooney bill has a strong chance of passage and to fight it accordingly. It is a serious threat to the school system and nothing should be neglected that will help to kill it. It is inspiring to observe how the people have become aroused over the menace.

Senator Frank Harris, who usually is to be found on the right side in legislative controversies, promises to fight the Rooney bill with all his strength. That is reassuring, for Harris possesses no little influence. Now if Senator Coyne, who has remained noncommittal so far, could be induced to make a similar pledge, there would be no cause for worry.

It is gratifying to learn that Representative Musmanno did not question the integrity of Gov. Pinchot, as was alleged the other day in reports of the debate on the question of abolishing the coal and iron police. Musmanno thinks the Governor is wrong in desiring to have industrial corporations' property guarded by state policemen whose wages, under the plan, would be paid by the corporations. The Sun-Telegraph agrees with Musmanno. But neither Musmanno nor the Sun-Telegraph thinks that Pinchot is trying to "double-cross" the people.

Gov. Pinchot feels that the men who guard the corporations' property should have wide authority. If they are to do police work, they must have police powers, he argues. Since the police would be solely responsible to the State, he apparently has no fear that they might abuse their authority in the interest of the corporations using their services. But since the corporations would pay their wages, under the plan, the police would be no more than human if they did not favor the corporations in times when strict impartiality was called for.

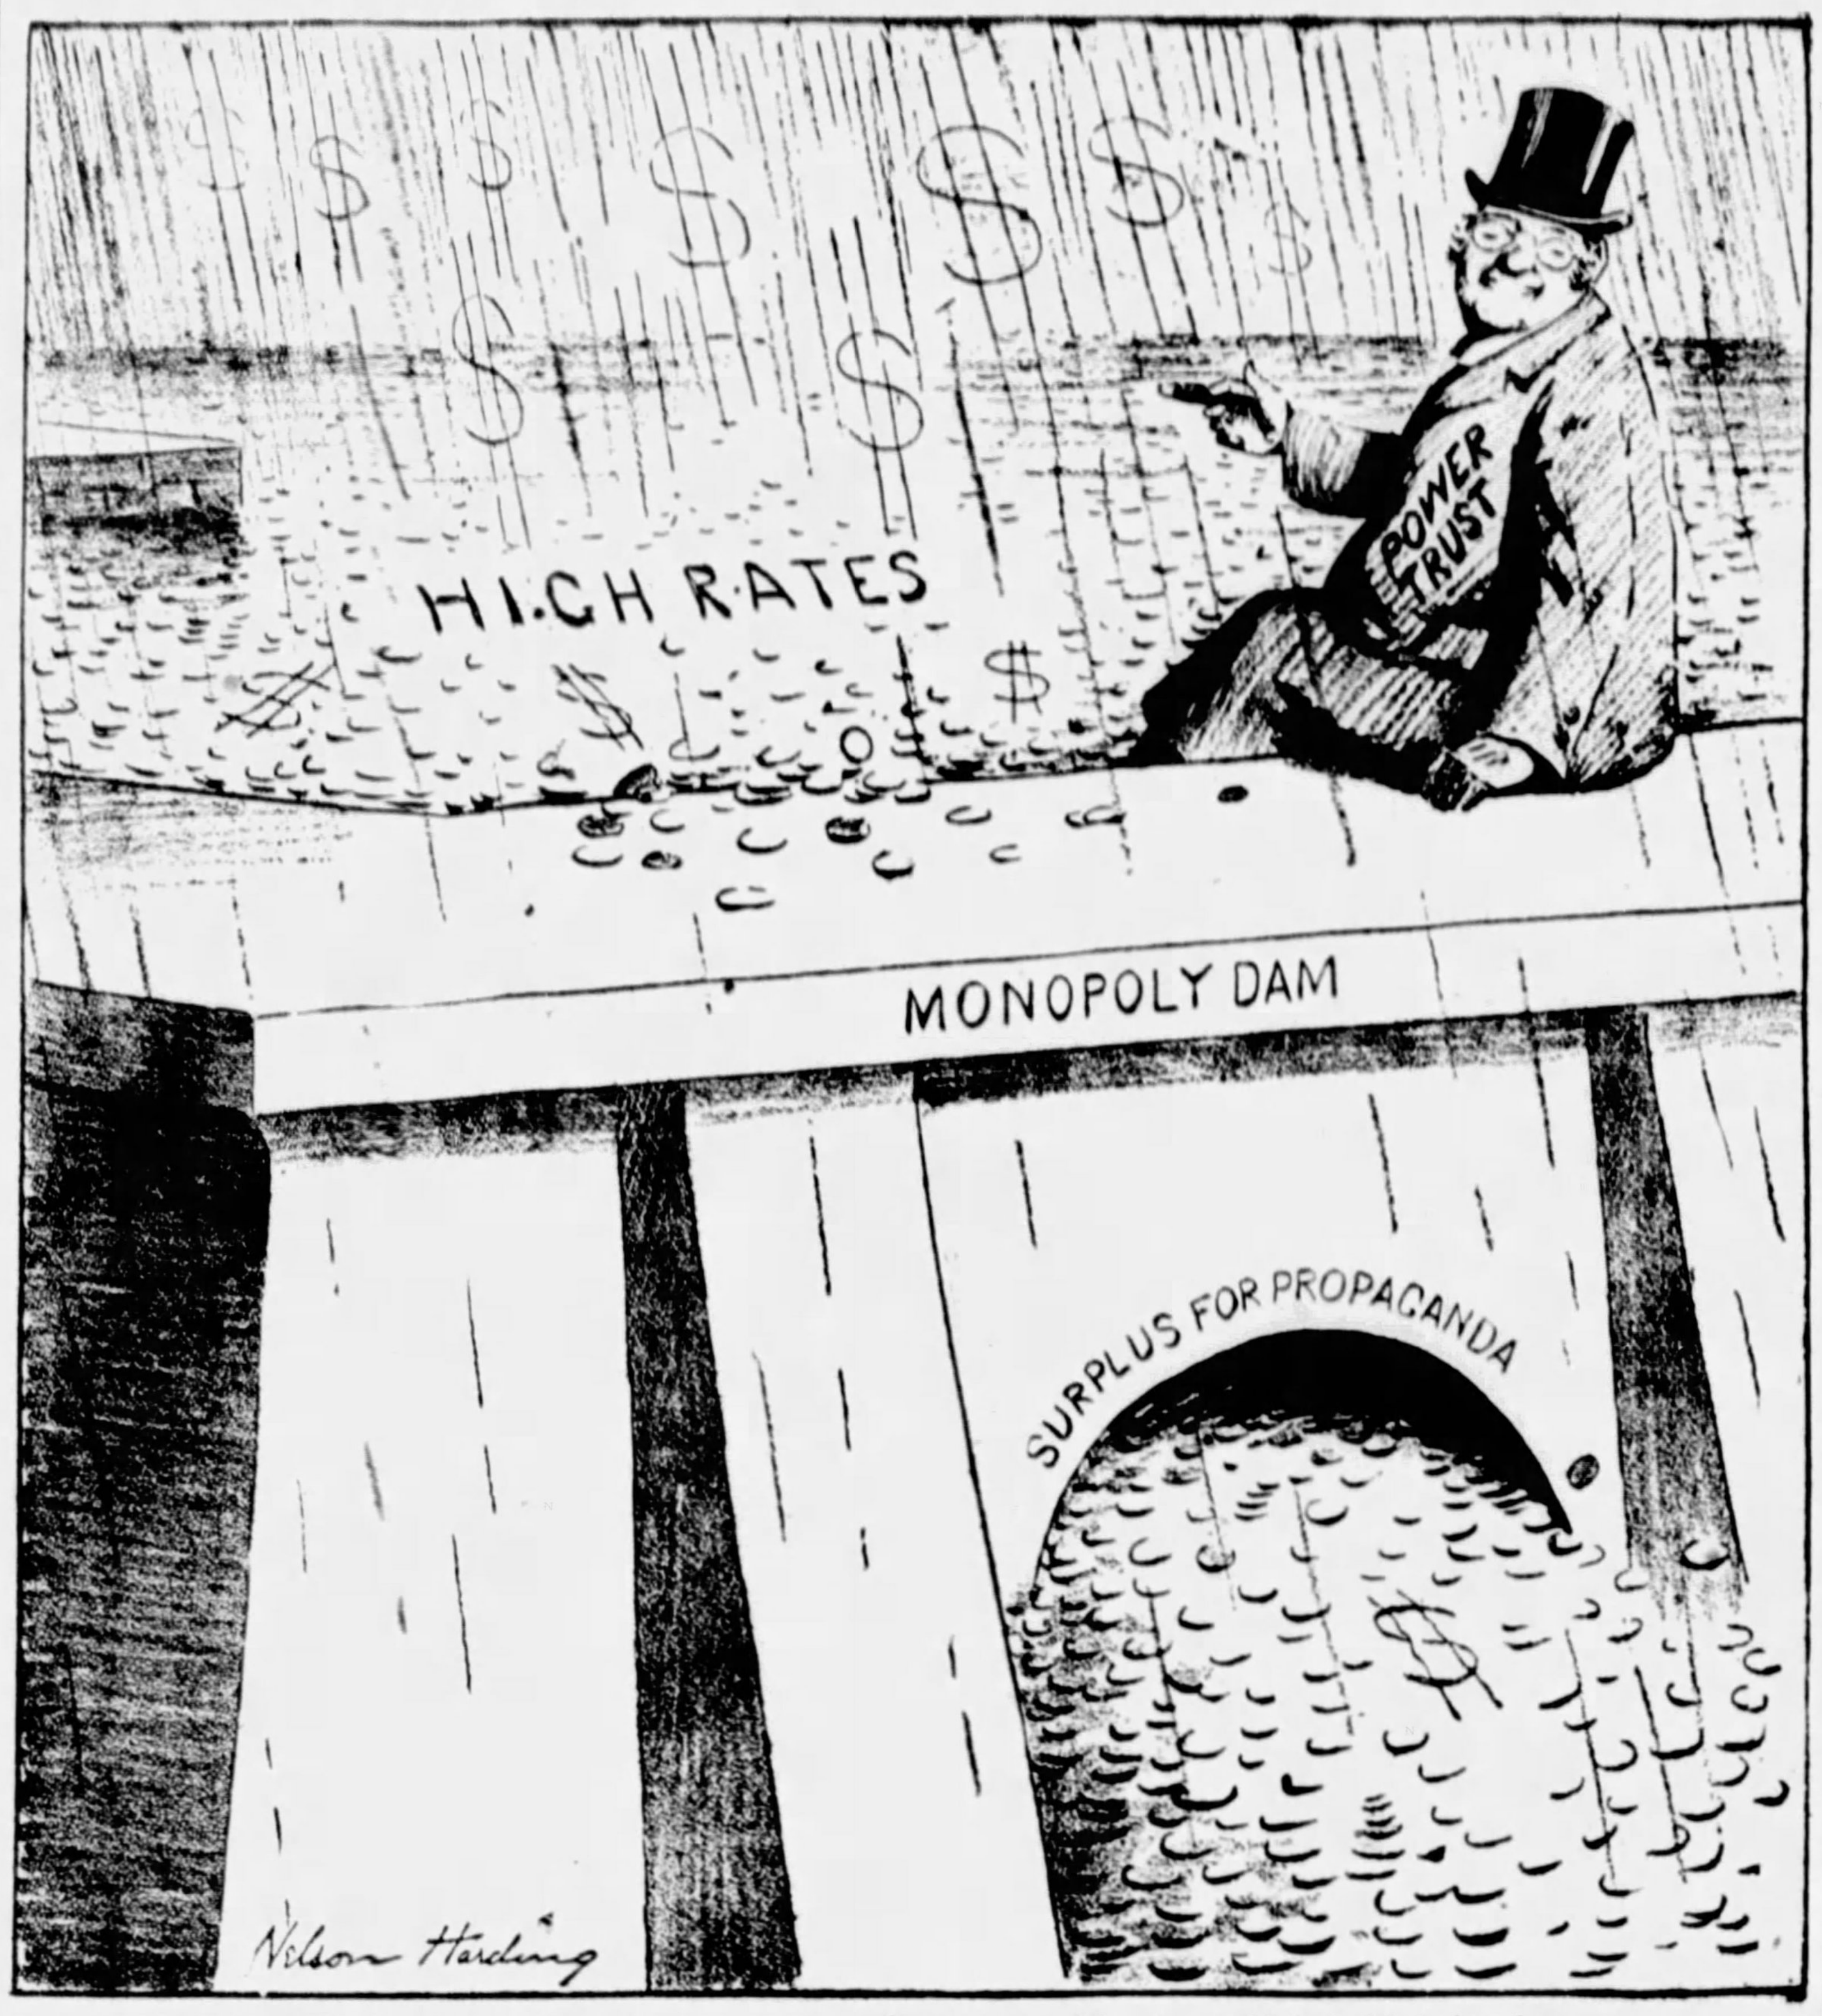
Musmanno's bill authorizes watchmen, who would possess ample authority to protect the companies' property, but be powerless when they left the companies' premises. In ordinary times watchmen are all that are needed. When there are strikes it is important that the police called in to preserve order shall be absolutely fair. That can best be assured by summoning state or municipal police who are under no obligation to the companies for wages or anything else.

Musmanno's bill would definitely prevent such outrages as the killing of John Borkowski and the oppression of the workers during labor troubles. While the measure favored by Gov. Pinchot would theoretically protect the people, in practice, it is to be feared, it would lend itself to evasion and abuse. It is better not to take the risk.

According to the almanac, spring arrived today. Mother Nature confirms the almanac. Robins have been here for several weeks, meadowlarks were singing this morning, and probably bluebirds could be found if one looked for them. Now if we could only have a few weeks of soaking spring rains! For the rural sections have not yet recovered from the drought, and wells and cisterns are still unpleasantly low.

WHO SAID DROUGHT?

By Nelson Harding



The Power Trust is not alarmed
By any fear of drought,
Its reservoir is brimming o'er
And some is running out.

It's always high behind the dam,
For in that Trusty clime
There is no drought to speak about;
It's raining all the time.

REPLACING EINSTEIN THEORY

By Archibald Henderson

Although opponents of Einstein's theories makes themselves mildly vocal from time to time, in the fruitless effort to pick flaws in the impeccable mathematical structure of relativity, no serious attempt to subvert and overthrow this structure has been made until very recently. Now Prof. James MacKaye, of Dartmouth College, has put forward an alternative theory, which he has sketched in outline in a fascinating work entitled: "The Dynamic Universe." It will probably be years before all the features of the new theory are clearly outlined, and their implications developed in mathematical and physical equations.

It has long been recognized that relativity is a mathematical, even more than a physical, theory. Many scientists have protested against the intricate mathematics involved in relativity, and in general against the geometrication of physics. Einstein bases his general relativity theory upon the idea of space structure. These structures may vary in proportion to the strength of the electromagnetic fields set up by hot masses of radiating matter. At a great distance from such influences, the space structure approximates to the simplest type, the familiar Euclidean structure. The nearer we approach to a large mass of radiating matter, the greater variation from the Euclidean model is found.

Moreover, the structure is not merely that of space alone. Time enters as a variable, with a character similar to that of a dimension of spatial character. The space structure varies from instant to instant, perhaps, while retaining its general character. This is what is meant by the strange amalgam, never yet adequately elucidated, known as space-time. The assumptions made by Einstein imply the functionality of time with space co-ordinates. Different co-ordinate systems implying different motions, involve different time measures. All those weird complications of which the Einstein theory is full are inescapable consequences of the basic assumption. Space-time is a four-dimensional curved space form; and this is inherent in Einstein's initial assumption. Similar statements may be made regarding other fundamental entities: mass, energy, acceleration and the like. The consequences of Einstein's theory cannot be avoided. The equations are mathematically correct, the agreement with experiment is satisfactory. Consequently, there seems to be but one alternative—to accept the equations, but to interpret them in a different way. MacKaye is not alone in considering the theory of relativity an amazing ingenious bit of mathematical sleight of hand, the last resort of a dexterous juggler of complicated formulas.

MacKaye sets out to replace Einstein's essentially mathematical and geometrical theory by a basically physical theory. The foundation of the new theory is radiation, a force as universal and as pervasive in the universe as gravitation. Perhaps gravitation is merely one of the large scale phenomena of radiation. Matter and ether are restored to a fundamental place in the cosmos, in this new theory. They are supposed to exist, as it were, in a sea of radiation. Radiation pressure is the dominant force, the prime motor, in MacKaye's universe; and to this influence the change of motion of matter is subject and subservient.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

WHY IS THERE SO MUCH TROUBLE BETWEEN MOTHERS AND DAUGHTERS?

You've thought of mother's side of the question with much sympathy. Has it ever occurred to you that daughter might have HER side of the question, also? Would you like to read a normal youngster's analysis of the immemorial mamma and daughter conflict? Then here it is today from Blondie, just as she handed it to us, red hot from the griddle:

DEAR ELSIE:

Gosh, I've just had another tiff with mother. It's common enough event, but I'm darned sick of it.

Why is it that mothers, just because they're mothers, are always supposed to be in the right? Never wrong, Elsie. NEVER. If you dare say they are, the whole family holds a convention and the mother boo-hoos and sniffles and says, "I know I'm nothing but a servant around here. I'm supposed to be the head of the house but (s-s-sob-s-s-sniff-sniff!) nobody pays the least attention to what I think or cares the least bit how I feel."

Then the whole family looks at the culprit with blazing eyes, and, wow!—talk about catching it!

Now, Elsie, do you call that playing fair? Shouldn't a grown woman be able to stand a difference of opinion without pulling that kind of stuff? Does the fact that she's a mother entitle her to break all the laws of fair play that way?

Please don't think I don't love my mother. Elsie, I do love her, but honest, she's just killing all my respect for her the way she takes advantage of being a mother.

Now, Elsie, I know I'm a flapper, and very headstrong, but I am NOT BAD. I am a good girl and I want to do right. But can my family see it? NO!

Mom always says that her daughters have perfect freedom and that it's "our" home, but when a young man of whom she disapproves enters the house, she promptly snubs him and lets him know that he is not wanted. And we are afterward informed of the fact. But if a young man whom she likes comes, she monopolizes his whole time, telling him of her struggles, illnesses, etc., and by the time she has finished you can bet our prospects with that young man are completely killed.

If a young man calls on the phone, mother is standing next to you to hear the entire conversation. She thinks in that way she will keep tabs on her daughters' lives. But, Elsie, one of my sisters gets all her phone calls at the office and meets her friends outside and, of course, mother thinks she knows all about everything she does and approves of her. But I hate that kind of sneaking stuff. I get my calls home here, and when I see mother listening I get so mad I deliberately say things to shock her. I suppose I am terrible, Elsie, but don't you think that a mother should have decent respect for her working daughter's rights?

There are a lot of things I disagree with Mom about, and I have flatly told her that I have a mind of my own, but she won't believe it simply because my mind doesn't run in the same groove as hers.

The reason I'm writing this, Elsie, is that I hope some mothers like mine will read it and wake up and realize that mothers ought to play the game fair as well as daughters. Perhaps there wouldn't be half as many wayward girls if mothers acted a little more square and fair at home.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELIS.

Marietta, Just Fifteen

Marietta, always smiling,
Greeting life with open arms,
Eager, winsome and beguiling,
Unaware of half your charms,
You are heir to all Earth's
You are as gay as sunlight lying
On your tresses golden sheen,
Carefree as the swallow flying,
Marietta, just fifteen.

You are heir to all earth's gladness,
Heritor of no regret;
April glamour, April madness
Yours with youth's bright amulet!
Far, far richer is your dower
Than the wide realms of a queen,
Earth for you an opening flower,
Marietta, just fifteen!

Text for Today Be sober, be vigilant; because your adversary the devil, as a roaring lion, walketh about, seeking whom he may devour.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND.

We Moderns

When a modern pair promise to take each other for better or for worse they mean only half of what they say—the "better" half.

* * *

It sometimes seems, to an attractive man, that the world is full of nothing but "yes-women," these days!

WELL—ER—IT WAS—ETC—

Now that men are recovering from the leg-fixation, which made facial beauty almost superfluous, they are gradually beginning to get a thrill out of looking into a woman's eyes, again.

* * *

Lots of women can't seem to enjoy a lively conversation, nowadays, until somebody turns on the radio.

* * *

Somebody is always taking the joy out of life for a modern girl, by assuring her that she is no worse than her mother was at her age.

* * *

The type of man who will tenderly wipe away a woman's tears, when she is peeling onions, can keep her peeling onions for him, all the days of her life.

No matter how poor an assortment of "consolation prizes" a woman may have drawn in the marriage lottery, she always prays that her daughter won't draw a blank.

* * *

"The fool who rocks the boat," after the honeymoon, is the one who tells the first lie, starts the first philandering or displays the first jealous suspicion.

* * *

At this time of year, home is just the place, where a man stops in, now and then, to get his golf clubs.

Isn't It So?

Don't let your neighbor know the full extent of your ignorance.

Experience is the name men give to their follies, or their sorrows.

It takes a clever woman to boss her husband without letting him know it.

A man doesn't have to dig up capital when he wants to manufacture excuses.

Those who take each other for better or worse are seldom prepared for the worst.

These Three Serve Men

And Men Do Not Know What They Are.

THREE GREAT MYSTERIES—OIL, ELECTRICITY AND THE SPIRIT OF MAN

"There be three things which are too wonderful for me, yea, four which I know not.

"The way of an eagle in the air; the way of a serpent upon a rock; the way of a ship in the midst of the sea; and the way of a man with a maid."

The ancient writer of proverbs found many things to amaze him besides the four mentioned above.

Ants that "prepare their meat in the summer," locusts that have no king, "yet go forth by bands," the spider that "taketh hold with her hands and is in king's palaces" all puzzled him.

Three of modern mysteries that are "too wonderful for us" are shown in the picture above.

Men use the power of oil taken from the ground. It moves 25,000,000 automobiles in the United States. No man knows whence the oil comes or how it was deposited in the "oil sands" that are saturated with it.

Men use the power of electricity in ways innumerable—for heating, cooking, lighting, executing criminals, sending messages around the world. They do not know what electricity is.

And most mysterious of all, worthy to be added to the ancient prophet's "eagle in the air, serpent upon a rock, ship in the midst of the sea and way of a man with a maid," is the spirit or mind of man.

Everything that we do we do with that spirit, the mysterious power within us. With that power we take oil from the ground, harness the force of Niagara to produce electricity, build submarines and airplanes.

But what that mysterious force within us IS we do not know. It lives inside of our bodies and apparently directs our physical and mechanical operation from its seat in the substance of the brain.

It has no shape, no size, no weight, and yet it does everything.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 21.—Mr. Jack Pansy, of Brooklyn, is, according to an ad, in Writer's Digest, teaching the art of columning. He says: "Writers wanted to train for humorist and columnist. Will Rogers earns $150,000 yearly. O. O. McIntyre $60.00. Heywood Broun $50,000. Floyd Gibbons (part time) $25,000."

A glance at the figures shows my standing among the moneyed stars and should end a lot of dirty rumors that I could pay my debts but am just too stingy. And it makes an awful sucker of the bird who wants his piano back. Let him go on with his replevin suit. My public will understand—both of them.

For years there has been a silly impression that I have been able to live on an income solely from my writing. Those close to me know that if it had not been for my squidget farm I would have been in a poor house long ago. When your income is but $60 a year you have to raise squidgets or something.

Will Rogers has one of those Spanish castles with gaudy awnings and a block long swimming pool. To say nothing of a private polo field. (Imagine that country jake shopping for polo mallets!) Heywood Broun lives in one of the penthouse mansions. "Old Part Time" Gibbons squats in the entire wing of a hotel.

And here I am six flights up—ring Gilhooley's bell. But despite my salary I'm fine, thanks. Anyway columning has been great fun. It yanked me loose from the south end of a north bound plow, furnished two passes to the Madison Square Garden Poultry Show and honorary membership in the Redbank, N. J., Bowling Club.

If Prof. Pansy won't think me just too fresh I'd like to tear him off a suggestion for his curriculum. I'm practically crawling with ideas. There may be some coarse connection between crawling and lousy—a fast one, eh professor! Am I annoying anyone? But anyway—

* * *

If I were a Pansy—that is a Prof. Pansy—I would certainly collect tuition in advance. They are as tricky as all get out. Shifty, no end. Did you ever have one look you straight in the eye? And are their fingers sticky? While you labor coaching them how to knit a wheeze out of a headline such as "Col. Roper Weds Miss String" almost anyone of them is liable to be sneaking down the fire escape with your tuxedo. Or are you folksy and informal at parties or just a plain Pansy.

* * *

By the way, there's a crack for your files in a morning paper headline. It reads: "Actress Bride of Ski-Jumper." Know the answer or give up? Why don't you hire me for your old school? I'd keep you and the class laughing for hours with a comment I thought up for that. It is a one and not all dirtied up either. But you are doing the teaching, you mug. I should tip you off how to make some cow-hand like Will Rogers a high salaried columnist and me with $60 a year. And falling hair!

* * *

A dozen or so columnists in the past few years have been turning out daily copy about New York—East Side, West Side, Fifth avenue, Broadway and all around the town. But do you know what? Out of the reams of drivel about the traffic conditions in the metropolis not one achieved the clearly cut cameo effect that Kin Hubbard, parked out in the corn belt, did in two lines. Said Kin: "The only way to cross a New York street safely is to lead a cow."

* * *

And your class will have to do a lot of home work to beat those slyly dropped observations of Dorothy Parker, who isn't a columnist. Recently she was hooting the popular fallacy that American men think of nothing but business, business, business. Sneered Miss Parker: "If it is true, then wherever did I get these bruises on my neck?"

* * *

If you can find a single student who can turn out a neat little paragraphing trick such as that, professor, send him around to me Tuesday at 5. I won't be in, but the walk might do him good.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Throughout your life, inconsequential things have been your worry.

No great trouble has come to you.

But the petty annoyances have caused many hours of anxiety.

Has it ever done you any good to waste your health and happiness thus?

Keeping yourself in a general turmoil because of vexations that really do not amount to anything has robbed you of your natural right to enjoyment.

Little disturbances at home, puzzling conditions in the business world, have had too great an effect on you.

Perhaps you fly into rages that are futile and over matters of so little importance that they should not in any way disturb you.

Your own mistakes and the indiscretions of others arouse you to the point where you can't take advice and you can't give it coherently.

Thus you cannot help others and do not fortify yourself.

Most of the things that people worry about should be banished as too insignificant in the big plan of life to be harbored.

Small people worry about small matters and if you realize that perhaps you would awaken to the fact that you are really too big for it.

While you are worrying about small matters, important ones are likely to occur.
